CLARK FORGING JAPAN LINKS?

TOKYO (CP) — Opposition Leader Joe Clark said today that he has been given what may be the first indication that Japan is ready to build new job-generating manufacturing plants in Canada.

In return, he said a Progressive Conservative government would be willing to give Japan priority rights to buy oil and other energy resources considered surplus in Canada.

Clark made the comments after outlining Canada's current unemployment problem to Japanese Trade Minister Masumi Esaki during one of a series of get-acquainted meetings with Japanese officials here.

After hearing Esaki talk enthusiastically of "virtually boundless" Canada-Japan trade opportunities, Clark said he suggested that "it would be quite useful to us to have more assembly and processing of Japanese manufacturing industries set in Canada."

"To my quite great interest, he indicated that he would give serious consideration to that kind of development." (See Fotheringham on page 3).

B.C. Jobless Tops 9%

OTTAWA (CP) — The British Columbia unemployment rate jumped to 9.1 per cent in December from 8.5 per cent in November, Statistics Canada reported today.

The B.C. increase was counter to the national trend which showed a drop of two tenths of one per cent in the same period to a seasonally-adjusted 8.1 per cent.

The number unemployed throughout the nation, on a seasonally-adjusted basis, dropped to 908,000 in December, down 11,000 from November.

Employment Minister Bud Cullen said today that Canada still faces some tough months of unemployment despite the drop in the rates.

"I'd be misleading the public if I said it was a trend," Cullen said. "I think we're still in for some tough months."

Progressive Conservative and New Democratic Party spokesman said the government is not spending enough on job creation.

Newfoundlander James McGrath (PC-St.John's East), whose province has the highest unemployment rate in the country at 17.4 per cent, called the level of unemployment "a human and economic tragedy."

He said a Progressive Conservative government would create jobs by cutting taxes to stimulate spending, offering incentives for private investment and research and development.

The jobless rate was lowest in Alberta where it dropped to 4.1 from 4.5 per cent.

The federal agency also reported that the actual number of people working in December was 10,140,000, up from 9,729,000 in December, 1977.

The seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate for men aged 15-24 dropped four-tenths of one per cent to 14.5 per cent in December while the rate for women aged 15-24 increased by two-tenths of a per cent to 14.3 per cent.

For men aged 25 and over, the rate declined by two-tenths of one per cent to 4.9 per cent. For women aged 25 and over, the rate dropped to 7.4 per cent in December from 7.5 per cent in November.

The unemployment rate in Prince Edward Island increased to a seasonally-adjusted 11.2 per cent in December from 11.1 in November. Quebec, which has the second largest work force after Ontario, showed an increase to 10.5 per cent from 10.4 per cent.

The rate in Saskatchewan rose to 4.8 per cent from 4.6 a month earlier.

Other provinces showed slight declines. The rate remained unchanged in Nova Scotia at 10.5 per cent.

In New Brunswick, the December rate declined to 11.6 per cent from 11.9 per cent in November. The unemployment rate in Ontario dropped to 6.9 per cent from 7.3 per cent a month earlier. Manitoba showed a drop to 5.8 per cent from 6.4 per cent.

Although the rate has slowly crept down to its current 8.1 per cent, few economists expect there will be a significant improvement in the unemployment rate this year.

Although the declining value of the dollar has improved the country's trade position significantly, producing a record trade surplus in 1978, the labor force has been growing almost as rapidly as the number of jobs created.

Slow growth in the United States this year, destination of about 70 per cent of Canada's exports, means slower growth in trade and the rate of growth in new jobs is expected to barely keep pace with growth in the labor force.

The slight improvement in the unemployment rate over the last year is the result of job creation outpacing growth in the labor force.

The labor force increased 399,000 in the last year while the number of jobs increased by 411,000.

Shah's Millions Shifting To Trust

Times News Services

TEHRAN — The shah today announced that all personal property of the royal family — estimated to be valued at hundreds of millions of dollars — would be turned over to a crown-sponsored foundation for religious, social and educational purposes, Radio Iran said.

The announcement came after 266 persons imprisoned by military tribunals for various offenses were pardoned by Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

The disposition of the royal property was revealed as demonstrators, demanding the overthrow of the shah and his tenuous new civilian government, marched in Tehran.

Falling snow held down the number of demonstrators and halted flights of evacuees fleeing the embattled country.

Meanwhile, the country awaited word on when the shah intends to go abroad on an extended vacation in reponse to pressure from the civilian government of Shahpour Bakhtiar.

In an attempt to bolster the new government, the United States has shifted its policy toward the shah and agreed that he should leave the country permanently, officials said today.

Radio Iran did not mention the amount of property involved in the turnover to the $1-billion Pahlavi Foundation, which was created 18 years ago with a personal grant of $133 million of the shah's wealth for use by charitable organizations, orphanages and higher education.

Palace sources said the latest property would include the shah's vast domestic holdings in company stocks, banks, factories and land.

Moreover, the opposition charged recently that members of the shah's family were among 178 top officials and political personalities who sent billions of dollars into private bank accounts abroad.

3 Killed In Motel Blaze

Prince George fire chief Harold Dornbierer said the blaze is believed to have been caused by a malfunctioning gas wall furnace in the Voyageur City Centre Motel unit occupied by the victims.

Police have not released the names of the victims.

Police said the victims are believed to have been sleeping when the blaze broke out.

The fire destroyed one unit, damaged four others and caused about $100,000 damage, Dornbierer said.

The fire was the 24th here in the first eight days of 1979 and the sixth major fire since Dec. 31.

Fire Tuesday caused about $2 million damage to a junior secondary school. A fire which destroyed an elementary school Dec. 31 caused more than $100,000 damage. Arson is suspected in the two school fires.

A blaze at a medical building Thursday destroyed the offices of three city doctors and the local Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society office. Two houses have also been destroyed by fire here in the New Year.

The deaths brought to six the number of accident fatalities here in less than 24 hours.

Trina Logan, 15, Ernest Langlois, 18, and Terry Renaud, 17, all of Prince George, died Sunday night when their car struck a parked transport truck on Highway 97, 28 kilometres south of here.

Meanwhile, in Kamloops, a library and two stores were destroyed early today when fire raced through a downtown shopping centre.

About 25 firemen battled the fire for two hours in -27 degree temperatures before bringing it under control.

Vander Zalm's View: Cartoon 'Malicious'

He was testifying at the opening of a libel case against Times Publishers, a division of FP Publications (Western) Ltd., then-publisher Stuart Underhill, editor Barbara McLintock and cartoonist Bob Bierman. Vander Zalm was minister of human resources at the time and now is minister of municipal affairs.

Vander Zalm told Mr. Justice F. Craig Munroe he did not regard it as a political cartoon.

"Here I see myself depicted as some monstrous person picking wings off flies. It's just terrible," he said.

He agreed that a political cartoon intends to convey a message or thought and because it was on the editorial page it was intended to be political in nature and that this cartoon contained a message or thought.

Asked what message or thought, he said: "I thought it was very malicious . . ."

He said the symbolism he saw in the cartoon was that the worst way to demonstrate a cruel person was to show him pulling wings off flies.

Asked if he thought the cartoon intended to say he was literally a person who did this, he replied: "It's certainly very illustrative. What else?"

But when shown pre-trial hearing testimony saying he didn't think it depicted him as literally a person picking wings off flies, but as a monster, he replied in court that what he meant was that people have not given the cartoon a literal interpretation and that he thought the flies were symbolic of defenceless people.

Asked if an interpretation could not be given that the minister was clipping the wings of people who abuse welfare, Vander Zalm said he did not take it that way. He said one of his major objections to the cartoon was that there was nothing it related to, "like a headline without a story."

MAGGIE LOSES TONSILS

OTTAWA (CP) — Margaret Trudeau, estranged wife of the prime minister, was reported in good condition in Ottawa General Hospital today after a tonsillectomy.

The 30-year-old Mrs. Trudeau was admitted Monday in preparation for the surgery, a hospital spokesman confirmed. She was expected to remain in hospital for a few days.

The prime minister remained in Vail, Colo., on a skiing holiday and is not expected to return to Ottawa until later in the week, his office said.

A friend in Montreal said Mrs. Trudeau had been complaining in recent weeks of influenza and a sore throat. Doctors recommended that her tonsils be removed, the friend said.

Juvenile Break-In Ring Smashed

Officers have recovered more than $6,000 worth of stolen property and arrested a 16-year-old Saanich boy.

Two other 16-year-olds, one from White Rock and the other from Saanich, have also been charged and two more are being questioned in connection with offences in Saanich and Victoria.

Among the items recovered were two outboard motors, car parts, signs, pop bottles, power tools and $800 worth of coffee that was stolen from a Dickson Coffee truck last month.

The boy's parents were unaware of their son's involvement and had not noticed the goods which apparently were moved into the house and hidden only a few days earlier.

Janzten said the thefts started about a year ago "almost as a lark," when one of the boys needed parts for a boat.

"From then on the whole thing mushroomed."

He said the boys discovered they needed power tools to work on the boat and that lead to a series of break-ins at construction sites.

Then they had to get parts for their cars and that resulted in thefts of batteries, parts and tools.

Recently the group had started breaking into grocery stores to get pop and food.

There were other thefts, Jantzen noted, which were harder to explain, such as the theft of flags from downtown Victoria, flashing lights off a Cablevision truck, an air horn off a parked transport and a complete hood off a taxi cab.

So far Oak Bay police have laid six counts of theft and possession of stolen property against the three charged so far. Other charges may be pending.

"It's going to take us a week to sort everything out," Jantzen said.

Cambodia Rebels Claim Control Of Whole Land

Times News Services

Cambodia's new government today claimed total control of the nation. Vietnam became the first nation to recognize the regime and the Soviet Union hailed the victory.

Intelligence sources in Bangkok said fighting was reported continuing but said Vietnam's tough army and its Cambodian supporters have overrun or isolated all significant resistance and assured total control of Cambodia.

They said heavy fighting was still underway in eastern parts of Cambodia near Vietnam but there was no indication former Khmer Rouge leaders were able to make good their threat to set up guerrilla bases to battle the Vietnamese "until final victory."

The Phnom Penh regime, meanwhile, reported today that thousands of people were flocking back to their native villages.

SPK, the official news agency of the provisional government which the Vietnamese army installed in Phnom Penh, said thousands of buffalo carts loaded with children and belongings were taking the villagers home from communal farms.

The report, broadcast from Phnom Penh, said a unit of the rebel movement's military forces was assigned to help the returnees.

Following the Communist victory over the U.S.-backed Lon Nol government in 1975, the government emptied the cities and villages and forced most of the population into the farms. Observers estimate that one million or more Cambodians were executed or died of hunger, exhaustion and disease on the farms.

"For the first time in many years, young men and women sang happily as they harvested," said the official report.

"Fires again warmed the kitchens in the houses on stilts along Highway 7, now restored to family life."

The fate of the Khmer Rouge government, which reportedly tried to flee Phnom Penh ahead of the offensive, was unknown.

An unconfirmed report said former prime minister and Communist Party boss Pol Pot had been killed under unknown circumstances.

In a related development, Cambodian Prince Norodom Sihanouk headed for New York from Tokyo today, saying he would seek U.S. diplomatic support for Cambodia's war with Vietnam but no financial or military aid.

The former Cambodian head of state expressed doubt there would be a UN Security Council session to discuss the Cambodian situation because of opposition from the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia.

Tree-Farming Rubber Stamp

The tree farm licence of Rayonier Canada (B.C.) Ltd. covering the South Moresby Wilderness Proposal area on the southern Queen Charlotte Islands will be automatically renewed, Forests Minister Tom Waterland has announced.

The licence is slated to expire May 1.

For the last four years, as Rayonier geared up to log the Moresby area, environmental groups have been urging the government not to renew the cutting licence.

The Islands Protection Committee and numerous other organizations have proposed a wilderness area for the unique South Moresby wilderness and had been hoping the government would call a public hearing on the matter.

But in a recent interview, Waterland said he was opposed to public hearings on such controversial issues as the Moresby proposal because the debates were usually too emotional.

The minister also said he accepts that some locations in the Moresby area should be set aside from logging.

Waterland said economic and environmental factors will be considered in working out the final cutting plan for the South Moresby wilderness.

He said logging in the region will create an estimated 1,000 jobs.

"The economic benefits are therefore most evident and must be appreciated, and the wilderness recreation and other values must also be appreciated."

Sinclair Ready to Do Battle

MONTREAL (CP) Canadian Pacific Investments president Ian Sinclair said after a two and a half hour board of directors meeting here that he will meet with Premier Bill Bennett soon and advise him of the eastern-based corporation's position on MacMillan Bloedel.

"I have instructions to express the concern, the deep concern, of our board that there would be any suggestion there could be discrimination against a person or corporation depending on his residence," Sinclair said.

"I am going back to B.C. to make certain that concern is understood and appreciated by everyone of interest."

Bennett has said acquisition of MacBlo by any firm outside of B.C. is unacceptable to the provincial government.

Sinclair said the board of directors could not compromise its position that CPI "is a Canadian company and has to be accepted, and should be accepted, as such in all parts of this country or else we haven't got a country."

A spokesman for MacBlo declined comment on the CPI decision.

Sinclair could not say when he would meet Bennett.

"I would certainly hope that by the end of this week, or the beginning of next week, this will be definitively disposed of."

Sinclair would not explain whether he was referring to his trip to B.C.or CPI's formal takeover bid for the huge forestry firm.

He said at this time, CPI only intends to take over MacMillan-Bloedel, and no formal offer has yet been made.

"I am very conscious of the market and conscious of my obligation to make full and timely disclosure at the earliest possible date," he added.

Sinclair refused to give details of the CPI board of directors meeting, nor would he discuss his meeting with Bennett last week, saying it was confidential.

Bennett held meetings last week with Sinclair and executives of MacMillan-Bloedel and Domtar Ltd., which had earlier abandoned its plans to takeover M-B. Bennett said then he was optmistic he would be able to prevent any takeover of the Vancouver-based company.

CPI, which holds a 13.4 percent interest in MacMillan-Bloedel, announced its intent to purchase all outstanding M-B shares when Domtar and the forestry giant were struggling for control of each other's stock.

If CPI decides to pursue with a takeover, Sinclair has said the offer "would be a par value of $28, convertible for five years on a one-for-one basis for a CPI share with a cumulative dividend of $1.75 annually, (yielding 6 ¼ percent), payable semi-annually."

MacMillan-Bloedel accounts for 56.6 percent of installed paper-making capacity in B.C. and 28.4 percent of the pulp mill capacity.

SIDNEY ISLAND OWNER DESPAIRS OVER PARK

Jack Todd, who first offered to sell the 2,000-acre island near Sidney to the B.C. government, said the government has been cool.

The Vancouver realty firm of Oceanside Investments is making a feasibility study of the island for a housing development.

"If the study is favorable, the chance of the island becoming a park will be slim," Todd said.

"The government could still make on offer but whether the offer would be acceptable is another matter."

He said a citizen group trying to save the island plans to ask the realty firm if it is interested in part of the island becoming a provincial park with the remainder for housing.

"This is a possibility but it's nothing like making the entire island a park," said Todd. "We kept it in its natural state, to the point of not allowing homes to be built on it and we increased the wildlife on the island."

Todd said he is astonished the government didn't accept the island when it was initially offered.

Todd refused to reveal his sale price but said "terms were easy.

"It could have been bought over a period of years," he said.

Todd said Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis was incorrect when he said the sale price of $3.7 million was too steep.

"He (Curtis) knew the price was negotiable and was aware of the negotiations that went on."

Deputy A-G Apologizes

Deputy Attorney-General Dick Vogel has apologized to the province's municipal police officers but still feels his comments weren't in any way offensive.

"If they feel I impugned their integrity, then I apologize. It was certainly not my intention, and as far as I'm concerned, I didn't impugn their integrity," he told a hastily-called press conference Monday.

His comments came close on the heels of a demand for an apology or his resignation by the B.C. Federation of Peace Officers after disclosure of a letter from Vogel to municipal police boards expressing concern about rising court costs.

Vogel's letter said as deputy attorney-general he has no jurisdiction over municipal police forces, but asked boards to be conscious of rising costs especially the high pay scales police receive for testifying in court on their days off.

The police were outraged by the comment in Vogel's letter which warned police boards that "policemen serving in areas which necessarily involve them in the giving of evidence might well be tempted, by reason of the very substantial sums of monies to be earned, to pursue matters such that they will have to go to court more often than might be necessary."

Police said the suggestion is a slur on their integrity and honesty, and pointed out they have no control over which cases go to trial and when the court dates for trials are set.

Vogel said later that the rising costs in courts where there are municipal police forces are out of the hands of the attorney-general's ministry and all he was doing was pointing out to police board chairmen one area they could look at in their contracts with police if they wanted to try and reduce court costs.

He said he was not making any recommendations for action and certainly made no allegations concerning the integrity of policemen.

CLOUDS BUMP COLD

The weather system which brought cold, clear days to most of B.C. for the past two weeks has been bumped out by another spreading high clouds over the Greater Victoria area.

The change has meant slightly higher temperatures and a trace of snow today in some parts of Southern Vancouver Island.

Weatherman Norm Dressler said today that another system is approaching the west coast of the Island but it will produce much the same conditions — mostly cloudy with occasional sunny breaks.

The high cloud is not expected to produce much precipitation but Dressler said there could be the odd sprinkle of rain or snow flurry.

There is no change in the current conditions forecast for the next few days.

"We're not calling for any [illegible] tem," Dressler said.

Once a system of Arctic air moved over the province Dec. 26 temperatures dropped to record lows in most areas.

However, with the current cloud cover there is a definite warming trend.

School Arson Try Probed

A police spokesman said paper had been piled on a carpet and set on fire in one of the classrooms.

Bill Allen, who operates a security service, was patrolling nearby when he heard fire alarm bells ringing at the school and turned in the alarm at 2:50 a.m.

Police said a window in the school had been jimmied open.

Bill Scott Service Sunday

A memorial service will be held at 2 p.m. Sunday at McCall Bros. funeral home for "lighthouse philosopher" Bill Scott who died in his sleep Sunday night on the Hawaiian Island of Maui.

Scott, 80, who had lived on Maui for the past eight months, will be cremated today and the remains brought to Victoria.

He left Victoria in May after 33 years, during which time he was often in the spotlight, often running for public office but never really expecting to get elected.

He first came to Victoria in 1939 and bought a rest home on Newport Avenue, then left again. Between then and his return in 1945 he spent time in five Japanese prisoner-of-war camps.

He became known as the lighthouse philosopher during the time he worked as a lighthouse engineer in China.

The name stuck when he came back to Victoria to run the rest home and a downtown pawnshop.

During a mayoralty campaign several years ago he challenged another candidate to a singing debate in the street. The candidate declined but Scott carried on and was eventually run in by the police.

In 1971 he dressed as Diogenes, complete with lamp in hand, and greeted Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau at the constitutional conference.

While most of B.C. remained in the grip of a cold front, temperatures in the southwest corner of the province moderated overnight. A vigorous Pacific storm appeared offshore, bringing a promise of rain to southwestern B.C. However, satellite pictures show that the storm is splitting with the main part moving south with only variable cloudiness reaching the southern portion of the province.

Burning Rectal Itch Relieved In Minutes

Exclusive Healing Substance Relieves Pain As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids.

If you want satisfactory relief from 'Itching Piles'—here's good news. A renowned research laboratory has found a unique healing substance that promptly relieves the burning itch and pain—actually shrinks hemorrhoids. This substance has been shown to produce a most effective rate of healing.

In one case after another 'very striking improvement' was reported and verified. And most important . . . this improvement was maintained over a period of months.

All this was accomplished by a healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulate growth of new tissue. Now Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H. Ask for it at all drug stores—satisfaction or money refunded.

Devalued Dollar Leaves That Shabby Feeling

By ALLAN FOTHERINGHAM
Special to the Times

TOKYO — The cavernous Canadian embassy with its 30-foot ceilings and weak drinks was the scene of a strange spectacle Monday night.

With the exotic and well-advertised delights of this infamous city awaiting them, the male reporters and aides accompanying Joe Clark were wasting away their time with a very decorous and dull buffet dinner in the cloistered surroundings of ambassador Bruce Bankin's residence.

It is not that seasoned travellers have shifted their attitude on embassy food. It is merely an indication of the changed status of the Canadian abroad in the era of the pre-shrunk dollar: a free meal is where you find it.

As Opposition leader Clark pays courtesy calls on Japan's top politicians and hints at swapping even more resource trinkets with industrial leaders, what is most apparent is the second-class nature of a Canadian in this land where the yen now kicks sand in the face of the once-mighty dollar.

The mysteries of the international exchange rate and floating currencies disappear at the first coffee shop breakfast, consisting of orange juice, a croissant and tea, which comes to $6. In this country, the arrival of the check tends to concentrate the mind wonderfully on the glories that were once Canadian.

When it costs an adult $9 dollars to get into a movie and a four-day-old New York newspaper (a man has to get his football fix somewhere) is $5 it's amazing the taste you can develop for embassy cold cuts.

"What do you do?" says Mike Galbraith, a Red Deer, Alta. native who is Japan manager of the Council of Forest Industries of British Columbia. "Well, you don't eat meat any more. You don't go out as much as you used to. You find ways for other people to pay for it."

In a nation where business entertainment deductions actually exceed its defence costs, the credit card is not only your best friend but your only guardian.

One Ottawa magazine reporter, not previously famous for his sybaritic habits, did a simple toting up on his first day here and found he had spent $142 on three ordinary meals.

It's good for the soul, one supposes, but as a scribe who spent a month here some 15 years ago to be impressed with the Japanese will to work and who was around again seven years ago to be impressed by the growing affluence, the major impression this trip is how badly dressed I am. Well, not exactly shabby, but that familiar feeling of being out of it when one encounters the fashionable dress on the main thoroughfares in Paris, Rome and Montreal. Tokyo now makes you look down at your shoes and your trenchcoat and wonder where you've gone wrong.

"I guess that's true," says Joseph Caron, a Quebecer who is commercial first secretary at the Canadian embassy, a stylish young man married to the daughter of a former Turkish ambassador. "We don't eat meat any more." Not when one famous cut of steak is $6 for a quarter-pound.

What has so clobbered the Canadians here in relation to the Japanese, of course, has been the dive of the unproductive dollar against the yeasty yen. Some five years ago, there were 300 yen to the dollar. Today there are 160 and fading.

At the start of that time span, the taxi meter started at 285 yen. Today it's 330 — a minor inflationary rate for the Japanese — but a doubling of the fare for a Canadian resident.

In the land where deductibility has become a religion, there is a way around this if you wish to close one eye. It will cost you $900 to fly from Tokyo to Vancouver if you buy the ticket here. If you buy it in Canada, it will cost you $515 to fly from Vancouver to Tokyo.

Such is the desirability of avoiding the omnipotent yen that Japanese travel agents have been willing to originate your Vancouver-bound ticket in Korea for the authorized $600 fare, rip the Seoul-Tokyo sgment off, toss it in the waste paper basket and still save money for the traveller.

If you wish to fly return Ottawa-Tokyo, the bill is $1,404. The embassy here, booking the same flight from this end, must pay $2,604.

A long-distance call from here to Canada is $20. From Canada to here, it's $9. The solution of course is always call collect from here to Aunt Mildred. You'll save money.

The giant Sony Corp. realizes that simple logic. All Sony calls around the world from here are billed through their New York credit card. There is now a standard order at the Japanese foreign ministry. All calls anywhere in the world are made collect — and the money-saving compensation made later.

Ottawa? You guessed it. The rule is that external affairs will not accept any collect calls and so the embassy here must pay the exorbitant rate that not even Japanese firms will abide. That's what logic will do for you.

Oil Tanker Still Burning

BANTRY (UPI) — Fire-fighting tugs today circled a blazing French tanker that exploded off Ireland's giant Gulf Oil terminal, killing 50.

More than 24 hours after twin explosions split the 120,000-ton Betelgeuse in Bantry Bay, a thick pall of smoke curled hundreds of feet above the burning stern.

The death toll — 43 crew members and seven Gulf Oil terminal workers — was believed one of the highest recorded in a tanker disaster.

Experts hope the fire will burn off most if not all of the 45,000 tons of Arabian crude oil still in the ship's tanks.

Eighteen bodies have been found in the icy waters of Bantry Bay, a southwest Ireland beauty spot which became Europe's first deep-water supertanker-unloading terminal in 1969.

With firefighters and investigators unable to get closer than 200 yards from the partly submerged tanker, authorities decided to let the fire burn itself out.

It could take several days. As long as the fire burned, there was the possibility the flames could leap the submerged mid-section and ignite the gases and crude oil still in the bow, said Bill Finnigan, chairman of Gulf Oil's Irish operations.

Meanwhile, Premier Jack Lynch of Ireland has promised a full inquiry into the disaster.

He acknowledged it will be difficult to establish the cause of the two explosions that blew the vessel apart.

BOY, 14, TORCHES HIMSELF

Police said Andrew Potter poured alcohol over himself and set himself of fire in front dozens of helpless friends and teachers.

30 Die In Fiery Wreck

ANKARA (AP) — A commuter train rammed into the back of another train stopped in a station near the Turkish capital today, killing 30 persons and injuring about 100.

Officials said two crowded cars were crushed. One of the cars caught fire and many of the bodies were badly burned.

It was the second fatal train wreck in this area in five days and the fifth train wreck in Turkey within a month. Two crowded passenger express trains collided head-on near the city early Friday, killing 16 persons and injuring 107.

Pretty Cold Comfort

What terrible agonies the nation suffered over the issue of bilingual air traffic control just 18 months ago.

□ Prime Minister Trudeau said it was the worst moment in French-English relations since the conscription crisis in the Second World War.

□ Ex-transport minister Jean Marchand resigned from the cabinet because he thought the settlement worked out with striking airline pilots was a "serious error," a denial of Canada's bilingualism policy.

□ Canadians argued furiousiouly about the safety of flying the skies with the airwaves cluttered up with a foreign tongue. Near-misses by aircraft in Brazil and crashes supposedly caused by linguistic misunderstanding in eastern Europe were gravely discussed. Some spurious claims for English as "the official language of aviation" were put forward.

□ Air travel was suspended for more than a week, and thousands of people were stranded short of their destinations at the beginning of the summer tourist season, while businesses dependent on the airlines were suddenly left high and dry.

But, as the prime minister said at the time, the worst effect of the controversy was not the damage to the economy or the inconvenience of travellers, but the rupture in English-French relations. The humiliation — it is not too strong a word — forced upon French-Canadians in the controversy probably played a part in the election a few months later of Rene Levesque and a separatist government in Quebec.

The message transmitted to Quebecers by the controllers and pilots was that the English-Canadians who dominated both professions would not even try to compromise, were not willing to see if Canada's other official language could be used safely to guide aircraft over a province where 80 per cent of people speak French. Their minds were made up — French and English used together in air traffic control were dangerous and that was that. It was yet another message — the loudest and strongest among a number of voices — that English Canada repudiated the federal government government's bilingualism policy of more than a decade.

And now, 18 months later, comes the technical study of bilingual air traffic control which was a provision of the strike settlement. A committee of technical experts from the federal transport department, the Canadian Air Traffic Controllers Association and its Quebec counterpart, les Gens de l'Air tested the safety of bilingual aircraft control with simulated aircraft movements at Mirabel and Dorval airports at Montreal.

They determined that a bilingual control system in Quebec "will have no detrimental impact on safety." And that even "some improvements in system safety may be achieved if the recommended procedures are implemented and rigorously applied."

It seems unlikely that these ironies will be greatly appreciated in Quebec. The report positively vindicates the use of French in the skies, but it provides pretty cold comfort at this late date.

The damage was done in June of 1976 and this document, welcome as it is, cannot erase the indignities and casual insults suffered then by angry, frustrated Quebecers. If it provides a lesson, let it be an admonition to Canadians to rein in our emotions, and on the issues of language and culture which divide us, to make an effort beyond the ordinary to understand. We must listen to one another.

Ahoy There, uh, Crew

Another sexist bastion falls. Under pressure from the B.C. Government Employees Union, the provincial highways department is scrapping its Men Working signs. "Success!!!", it trumpeted recently in the union publication, The Provincial.

"We are pleased to report that the fight has been won! After months of of stalling the offending signs are going to be changed."

Will motorists be seeing Persons Working signs on the highways? Or Flagperson Ahead? It's not quite so bad as that. The chauvinist curmudgeons of the highways department bent to the revisionists' will, but only as far as substituting the nautical term "crew."

So watch for Crew Working and Crew and Equipment Ahead. And the jolly flagman? Now it will be Traffic Control Ahead.

With victory on the signs behind them, will the anti-chauvinists turn now to other ugly examples of discrimination? Manhole covers are being lifted everyday, and who ever thinks he is offending while doing it? Somebody should set things straight. To the barricades, crew.

Keep It Small

As residents of the Sidney shoreline between Shoreacres and the commercial area at the foot of Beacon Avenue, we were appalled to read of the plan for the breakwater complex.

We are strongly opposed to having any portion of this breakwater go beyond the present commercial areas on the waterfront.

In addition to the pollution of the beach in front of our homes from oil products, and the attendant effluent from boats with no holding tanks, we will lose the quiet enjoyment of our waterfront property and have the outstanding view interrupted.

This waterfront contains a very large kelp bed, which is a feeding ground for migrating birds of all kinds: brant, Canada geese, ducks of every type, oyster catchers, etc. It is a constant source of delight to countless beach walkers at all times of the year.

Since this breakwater was first suggested as moorage for 500 transient boats in conjunction with our present government wharf, and since these boats enter our waters in the main from April to October, is it the intent to issue a licence to operate a marina inside the breakwater? It is interesting to note that 1,100 boats are now planned for — including those to be moored at the present marina.

It is also worth noting that the flooding tide rotates to the south, thereby sweeping any raw sewage forced out of the old sewage outlet due to pump failure in the station at the foot of Rothesay into the planned opening of the basin. It is also obvious that the flood tide will flow strongly into the basin and ebb strongly, bringing all flotsam out with it to further soil the coastline.

We support the concept of a moorage basin for the foot of Beacon Avenue, but only if it is confined to the present commercial area. We feel we should not be subsidizing a breakwater through publc funding for commercial interests. — Tom and Margaret Donaldson, 2519 Rothesay Avenue.

TV Substitution

It has become a practice, with the blessing of CRTC, to substitute signals and commercials during the telecast of programs on American channels.

That this practice makes these programs look more Canadian is very stupid: in fact, they do not. Often they create some confusion, deprive the viewers of small parts of a story they are interested to hear in its entirety, as it happened very recently when we missed the beginning of a new program, as our prime minister was interviewed both on CTV as well as on an American channel which was not carrying that interview.

Unwanted "clippings" from time to time spoil NFL games,and other features which we used to enjoy without unwanted interruptions.

There is little if anything we can do to correct this practice or malpractice as we evaluate it. But, as free citizens in a free country we are not absolutely powerless. We can let the advertisers on borrowed time know that we will not buy any of their products unless they are advertised on Canadian channels (2, 8, 6 and 21) during their normal telecasts. We can show our displeasure by writing CRTC and our Canadian stations, we can express our views through our other media, and even try a courteous note by mail to our MPs in Ottawa.

If none of these means bring about a satisfactory end, at least we will have tried. As long as we remain passive, indifferent, apathetic, the nuisance will remain as it is, and probably get worse.

Only people who care in words and deeds can bring about changes, and that not only about television practices! — E. J. Lattes, 432-200 Dallas Road.

Sidney Island

Re: Sidney Island for sale (Sidney Island Sale Scheme 'Tragic'; Times, Dec. 30).

Several years ago we made a short vegetation survey of two parts of Sidney Island, the northwest marshy area and the southern tip of the island. The large marsh in the northwest part of Sidney Island is unique in British Columbia and represents the northernmost extension of several plant communities. The most interesting plants in this area are jaumea, jaumea carnosa, and graceful arrow grass, triglochin concinnum. They are known to us from several locations on the Saanich peninsula, from Sooke and from Saltspring Island. In these areas, however, they do not form large stands comparable to those on Sidney Island. Both species are on the list of rare plants in British Columbia. The Sidney marsh presents a unique opportunity of studying their ecology and deserves strict protection.

The southern part of Sidney Island hosts a Californian species of pigmyweed, tillaea erecta. In our area, we found it on another location on Vancouver Island and in two places on San Juan Island. It is a pity that the native vegetation of this part of Sidney Island was greatly altered due to heavy overgrazing.

My recommendations are:

□ The provincial government should at least buy the marsh at the northwest end of Sidney Island and turn it into an ecological reserve.

□ Land use of the southern part of Sidney Island should be directed in such a way that the habitats of tillaea erecta are not destroyed. I propose that a limit far below the level of current usage be put on the grazing in this area.

I want to stress that these recommendations are limited only to those areas of Sidney Island we know relatively well. A survey of the rest of the island is needed if vegetational aspects play any role in the decision concerning the future of Sidney Island. A more detailed vegetation study of Sidney Island may bring even more surprises. — Adolf Ceska, Ceska Geobotanical Research Co., Victoria.

Write the Premier

The Victoria Times and its editor are to be congratulated for printing the letter of Phil Esmonde (Renew the Pledge, Dec. 28) re the plight of the children (especially) inside Vietnam today. It is not only a moving and informative statement regarding the suffering Dr. Hitschmanova told us of and which is still going on, it also brings us individually into the situation at a time when most of us are suffering from too much of the "good life," and it reminds us that a third of the world's population is suffering from too little. In places like Vietnam the suffering is acute.

Finally Mr. Esmonde suggests the least we should do is write to Premier Bill Bennett to fulfill a pledge he made over a year ago to honor a still earlier promise of the entire provincial legislature to send money — dollars already voted on — to help alleviate the suffering of Vietnamese children. This is an excellent suggestion because no new legislation is needed. And the premier can, if he chooses, expedite the matter. (The committee has long since "lapsed" but the technicalities can be surmounted.)

While we must not neglect thousands of refugees fleeing starvation. neither can we ignore the millions of Vietnamese starving, and unable or unwilling to leave the country.

Do write as Mr. Esmonde suggests and ask Premier Bennett to fulfill that long standing promise. And if you wish to make a personal commitment why not respond to the suggestions made by Dr. Hitschmanova in her articles carried in the Times. — H. H. Sorensen, 1564 Gladstone Avenue.

Ribald Commercial

On New Year's Day between 3 and 6 p.m. I saw two commercials for the I, Claudius series on CKVU, Channel 13. These commercials were sensational in nature, focusing on the naked, shaking breasts of a group of dancing women and on the undulating, minimally-covered groin of a single dancing lady. While I think that I, Claudius at times wallows in the grossness it sets out to depict, that is not the point of this letter. Much more important and much more abhorrent is the fact that these commercials were shown during prime children's viewing time. Indeed, the second commercial was shown during Bugs Bunny! Pretty sick stuff to have visually assaulting our kids.

I find many commercials base and tasteless and I deplore them. There is little they do not talk about or show. I thought I'd become inured to these mindless intrusions, but sadly CKVU managed to surprise me once more. They've established a new low in television advertising. (Although, to be fair, it must be admitted that the commercials BCTV runs for the Crazy Horse night club aren't much better.)

Either CKVU doesn't know that 1979 has been declared the year of the child or they're trying to mock that declaration. In either case, their thoughtless irresponsibility should be reported to the CRTC. — Colleen and Patrick Wolfe, 521 Laren Road.

Labor Goes All Out for NDP

OTTAWA — During the federal byelections last October, an odd thing happened in the Newfoundland riding of Humber-St. George. Twice, the huge paper mill at Cornerbrook was closed by brief wildcat strikes.

Odder still, the mill workers didn't stream straight from plant gate to the nearest tavern. Instead, they trudged about town knocking on doors.

They were using their time off to canvass for the New Democratic Party. On Oct. 16, the combination of an attractive candidate, Fonse Faour, and of the organizing skills of the Canadian Paperworkers' Union, brought the NDP its first ever win in Newfoundland.

Party's Big Brother

"I'm not saying that'll happen again," said Canadian Labor Congress president Dennis McDermott, when he'd finished chuckling. "I am saying we mean it when we say we are going all out for the NDP."

The success or failure of the attempt by McDermott and the CLC to deliver the union vote to the NDP in the next election could shape our political future. If it succeeds, we'll have a minority government with the NDP holding the balance of power. If it fails, we may not have an NDP much longer.

Nominally, organized labor has been NDP's big brother since it halped create the party in 1961. An absent-minded godfather would be a better description. Aside from some money, a few dedicated organizers and much rhetoric, labor has never stuck by the NDP where it counts — in the ballot boxes. A study of the 1974 election by four Carleton University professors for the book, Political Choice in Canada, reveals that the NDP won just 20 per cent of the union vote. (The Liberals, with a whopping 51 per cent share, have the most to lose.)

Wage and price controls were the catalyst of change, says McDermott. "Even mushheads in the labor movement realized that collective bargaining was no longer enough. We had to become part of the political process."

The other agent of change is McDermott. He became president last April. Three months later, he got a unanimous (with two abstentions), CLC executive council decision to go for broke on the NDP.

Among the many names McDermott has been called, "mushhead" isn't one. He's the congress' first leader to possess — a tired word I admit — charisma. He's blunt, cocky, blasphemous, passionate and impossible to overlook. The day I saw him, McDermott was wearing a tie. He immediately apologized: "I only wear the damn thing because of the cold." Usually, he wears shirts, cleaved precariously close to his navel, with, among his chest-hairs, a gold medallion that says chai, the Hebrew for life. He's 56, and some of his jet black hair comes out of a bottle.

McDermott never commits himself to a cause except head first, and feet pumping. At a public rally, he told autoworkers, whom he then headed, that he'd "clap your balls" if they didn't pitch in on some issue. They did.

FONSE FAOUR
. . . paperworkers helped elect MP

At different times, McDermott has taken on the NDP (the Saskatchewan and Manitoba governments for accepting wage and price controls), other unions (the postal workers, two months ago), and the entire country (he was the sparkplug for labor's, one-day protest against controls in October, 1976). Equally, though, McDermott isn't afraid to work with government. He rates Ottawa's new board of economic development ministers, "a good concept that we'll work with. If you've a chance to make real input you take it, otherwise to stand outside bitching is just bullshit."

Now, he's made the NDP's cause his. McDermott will campaign coast-to-coast. He's thought ahead far enough to realize that a mid-election, unpopular strike "could be devastating. We'll want to make sure some guys don't go off half-cocked to the barricades."

Of the prospects ahead, McDermott says, "I've got a gut feeling that if we do it right, we'll produce."

On the evidence, McDermott and the congress are doing it right. In the past, the congress lectured its members from on high that it would be nice if they voted NDP. This time, the congress will tell the rank-and-file why it's in their interests to vote NDP, and they'll get the message across where it'll be listened to — on the assembly-line and shop floor.

Last summer, 150 or so congress staffers, assembled from coast-to-coast for the first time, went through an intensive, one-week course in electioneering, from canvassing to running committee rooms. A half-dozen NDP MPs, including party leader Ed Broadbent, took part in the seminar.

What If . . . ?

Starting this month, about 10,000 union officials across the country, guys in windbreakers rather than suits, will go through similar courses. In addition to election tactics, they'll learn what McDermott calls "kitchen economics," that is how to talk about the Big Issues across a lunch pail. In turn, these shop stewards and local officials, will pass their lessons on down to the shop level.

"We're going to reach workers, and their families, through the people they know and trust — the people they elected and whom they work with every day," says McDermott. Come the election, this at present invisible army, "will put all regular business on the back burner."

Suppose it doesn't work. McDermott shrugs. "Well, we'll be left sucking eggs."

Is McDermott going to issue a personal challenge to Canadian workers, either to deliver the vote or to humiliate him? McDermott smiles. "That's an interesting psychological approach I hadn't thought of." The thought also strikes me that he'll threaten to clap them, you-know-where.

The Generation Gap Not Meant to be Crossed

By HENRY FAIRLIE

(Fairlie is a British free-lance journalist working in the U.S. He wrote this for the Washington Post)

No one who knows me would deny that I am fond of children. Yes, children in abundance, I say — but children in their place, I add. By the end of another Christmas in America, the scrooge in me has formed a new collective noun: a chill of children.

Those interminably uplifted and expectant faces, when they think that they can wheedle something out of one! Those interminable pouting and accusing faces, when they find that one cannot be wheedled! Americans are not the most prolific of peoples, so why do their childen always seem to be everywhere?

No wonder the moment comes when the sight of another child's face makes one chill. It is not only visitors from Britain who, for two centuries, have complained about the terrorism of the American child: when Henry James returned to the United States, it was one of the phenomena on which he fixed.

Something must be done about it before the tricentennial.

I have long admired a friend who is now a judge in England who on one occasion, when my 3-year-old son was disrupting an adult occasion, took him aside to show him the immense kneehole of the judge's mahogany desk. "Simon, my dear chap", he said, "that is a cave. It is the deepest cave in the world, with treasures that have never been found. Go and find the treasures."

Simon crawled into the cave and, three hours later, could hardly be fetched out, since he had not found the treasure. When he was at last extracted, his "Uncle Billy" said to him magisterially, "Ah, didn't find any treasure, Simon? I found a little the other day, so you have it," and gave him two half-crowns. That is what "Uncle Billys" are for: to buy off children before they chill.

But it is not really of children that I am thinking. The whole question of generations is one that has received far less attention from historians or philosophers or sociologists than it deserves. One looks around an assembled group during the Christmas holidays and wonders where the line of generations can be sensibly drawn.

This question seems to me all the more interesting because I think it is now generally agreed — although only a few at the time had the intelligence and even courage to say it — that the notion of a "generaton gap" in the 1960s was a fiction created by the media.

If anyone thinks that there was a "generation gap" in the 1960s, he or she should read Jerry Rubin's Do It!, which is one of the primary documents of the times. He was not rebelling against his middle-class parents; he was merely carrying their own behavior and attitudes one step further.

His book is almost a song of praise to his parents: "You taught us....You showed us". The demoralization of middle-class parents in the 1960s was largely the result of their own recognition that their children were the reflection of their examples.

The idea of a "generation gap" obscured the fact that there may have been a genuine social and political protest to be made: it was a useful way of channeling the protest into harmless activities of picking daisies, taking drugs and making love.

It was also exactly what the commercial side of the media wanted: here was the youth market deliveed into their hands. Generation gap? Why, yes. Here are your records. Here are your jeans. Here are your lollipops. Billions of dollars of them.

It seems to me the only way to begin to talk honestly about this mysterious question of generation is personally. As I grow older, I find that more and more of my life is necessarily attuned to those who are half my age. They may edit my copy. Some of them may even be my editors. There are even a few who take it into their heads to commission work from me. And out of the unestimated number of them, a handful become as true and vivid friends as in all one's life.

The difference of age falls away very quickly. I do not think that they spend much time thinking of me as "old," anymore than I spend much time thinking of them as "young." But the difference of generation seems to me quite another matter. It seems to me not a gap, but a bridge.

As I contemplate my newfound friends, my mind strays back a quarter of a century, to the time when I was as young as they, and I made firm friends among people as old as I now am. Those elders are now mostly dead. I never thought of them at the time as "older" than me, or of myself as "younger."

Yet they were of a generation not mine, and into my ears and minds, and willing heart, they poured all their generation. They encouraged me, as no one of my generation could have done, from their own experience.

If I were to pick out one, it would be Philip Harding. He was an editorial writer on The Times of London when I was a brash and up-and-coming one. Royal Marines. Col. P.J.R. Harding, to be exact. It was about 10 years after the end of the Second World War, and the Wren churches in the City of London were just being rebuilt.

I had not known them as a schoolboy; I had never seen them whole. He knew them all like the back of his hand. Again and again at lunchtime he took me on walks to see the churches being rebuilt. Only someone from another generation could have been such a guide.

And from another generation there was more. Royal Marines, he may have been. He also had had a troublesome relationship with the Communist Party in the 1930s. Bit by bit, as he let names and incidents be known, he gave me a picture of what it was like to be a Communist "intellectual" in Britain in the 1930s, which no memoir that I have read even touched in its detail. One day perhaps I will write his story, but what interests me here is that, without any sense of difference of age, the difference of generation was a bridge.

There is a difference even in vocabulary. He often corrected mine, and I often presumed to correct his own. But it is a bridge to be kept firm on both sides, and never lightly or too eagerly to be crossed.

Don't blame the Nasty children, They copy us

My own description of this difference between generations would be that, whereas two people of the same generation may meet in the middle of the bridge, and then continue on together one way or the other, people of different generations meet in the middle, stay there and converse and then go back their own ways. It is just about as precious a way of knowing someone as any other that is more likely to be celebrated.

Generations are the purveyors of memories. Not only the memories of the older generation to the young, but the memories of the future that the young already hold. To cross the bridge would spoil it all, and America has too casual a sense of generations.

In one of his few masterful essays about America, which is reprinted in The Dyer's Hand, Auden said America needed an aristocracy. An aristocracy not of birth, certainly, and even more surely not of wealth.

What it needed, he said, was an aristocracy of age. The most urgent need in America was for initiation rites. He struck deep, there, into the American soul — much deeper, as far as I am concerned, than de Tocqueville. And one is returned, at that point, to the chill of children.

The children are so ubiquitous — and so similar, one may add — because the parents have conceded. It is the parents who have crossed the bridge, when their children only wanted to meet them halfway. These children are not pampered, as the criticism usually goes, they are despoiled; the parents use them as sites to plunder, where they may find the elixir of youth.

To say that the American child is spoiled is a commonplace. But that it is spoiled rotten may be nearer the truth. Jerry Rubin's main chant in Do It!— and his main complaint — is that the children always won against their parents. This may be changing, but for it to matter in the long run, a sea-change in American culture is necessary.

The greatest lack in America is the elders, outside the family, who are at least as trusted by the child as the parents. Elders who are friends but, equally, do not attempt to cross the bridge. When I heard from my English master at school that Arthur Waugh, the father of the writers Evelyn and Alec Waugh, lived down the hill, I exclaimed with all my 12-year-old enthusiasm that I wished to meet him. My English master arranged that I should call on him for afternoon tea.

The door was opened by the most imposing Victorian figure I have ever met — he was a great publisher in his own right — and I lifted my school cap and said, "Fairlie, sir. Mr. Stevenson sent me, sir. Please, sir." The huge Victorian frame gathered me in.

He of some 80 years; I almost a seventh of his age. I sat on the edge of my chair, as he pressed sandwiches on me from silver plates, and I said. "Tennyson, sir, he's my favorite....No. not Browning, sir....I don't think I understand Browning."

He had met them both. He had published them. At the end of tea I said, "Thank you, sir, thank you", and he said, "Why don't you come, Fairlie, to tea next Thursday?"

From that day on I had tea each Thursday with Arthur Waugh until both our lives were disrupted by Hitler. As we grew to know each other, I sat less awkwardly on the edge of my chair, and he talked more and more about writing, including some pointed remarks about his son Evelyn: "Evelyn can write, but he can't write a novel. His work may live. But he's not a novelist."

This enormous friendship with a man so much my senior. What can I say? I can say that neither of us thought of crossing generations. We enjoyed the bridge too much.

When Old Meets Young . . .

By KATHLEEN REX

NIAGARA FALLS — Ninety-year-olds here are going into kindergartens and tots into homes for the aged, because D. H. Rapelje believes in mixing up the generations. Rapelje is director of the senior citizens department of the regional municipality of Niagara.

Some of the elderly men and women at Dorchester Manor recently were entertained by a choir from Simcoe Street School while others in the home spent an hour helping first-graders at Drummond Road School with their reading.

Variations in this mingling of the young and the old have been going on in schools and senior citizens' homes for several years, and everybody seems to benefit. At least one principal says children at his school are reading better since 70- and 80-year-olds began coaching them.

Individual reports from the homes also have been encouraging: One elderly woman who didn't want to get up in the morning now is up and about early, and has been spending more time at the library, where she is doing research on teaching.

Another woman has become involved in craft classes, and now is asking to do extra work with children.

The programs are experimental, and also vary in approach according to the age of the children and the availability of the old persons involved. Rapelje says plans also can be adjusted to changing conditions. Originally the old people in Dorchester Manor used to be in the classroom with the children. However, over the years many have become less mobile, and the children are brought to them one afternoon a week.

The generation gap is bridged in different ways at other homes. A child day-care centre has been established on the grounds of Northland Manor in Port Colborne, and residents frequently are at the centre helping with the activities.

Young adults from a school for the mentally retarded visit another of the homes at meal-time to help those with physical handicaps with their meals.

Six or seven residents from Sunset Haven in Welland go to an elementary school several times a week to help the children with their lessons.

"The home even sponsors a little-league soccer team called the Sunset Haven Squirts," Rapelje said. "Residents never miss an opportunity to watch them play and cheer them along."

Grades 4, 5 and 6 from a nearby school also take crafts at the home and made a quilt with the help of the residents. The quilt later was raffled off at the home and the money presented to the school library.

Next step, Rapelje says, will be talks with the board of education about engaging high school and university students for a kind of home help program for elderly persons still in their homes.

"We talk about a generation gap, but with a little effort there doesn't have to be such a thing," he said.

katharine whitehorn

LONDON — Few things could be more pathetic than the fuss made in the British media about a book that has just come out called U and Non-U Revisited. It's not the book that's absurd — it takes a witty and cynical view of the whole thing — but the reaction to it. And not least among those who are not, don't want to be and never have been mistaken for "U" (or upper middle class) at all.

What's absurd is that it has all been discussed in terms of whether the British are as snobbish as they used to be, whether the British ought to have some guardian of good language like the Academie Francaise in France, whether the British care any more about the accents and phrases of those who are socially Right while everything else is socially Wrong.

The entire thrashing and squawking has left out the simple fact that the English language isn't British any more.

When Nancy Mitford, with the scholarly help of Professor Alan Ross, enshrined U and Non-U in the book Noblesse Oblige in 1956, it was still possible to maintain, just, that London was the fountainhead of the only true language. Looking back, it seems obvious that in this, as with so much else around Coronation time, we thought we were re-affirming ourselves in a new era, when actually we were in the closing throes of an old one.

Certainly by the mid-1960s British sociologist Geoffrey Gorer was able to analyse, as if from a great distance, why "U" had seemed so important.

In the old days, he said, the style-setting band in British society had been, not the top aristocracy, but the upper middle classes — the "U".

Most of the effective power was in their hands; much of it centred on big country houses where you wouldn't be invited if they thought you were an outsider; and the style was set not just for the Brits but for the entire aspiring Empire as well.

But by the late sixties they weren't setting the style for anyone but themselves, let alone wielding the power. The scene had shifted to the style of the affluent worker: his clothes (jeans and bright shirts), his music (rock), his morals (let us say robust), his language. And his language was rough, direct and very influenced by America — which was not unreasonable considering that three times as many people speak English there as do in Britain.

The "U" world hasn't gone away, and there are still a few clubs and boards where they only like the sound of their own voices; but where are the outsiders trying to get in?

Do Australians queue up to get their raucous voices sorted out so that they'll be invited to the best houses? Of course not — they buy the best houses, and the worst newspapers too. Do Americans go around like Henry James collecting British social nuances? Only in the same way and for the same reasons that they collect horrible beer steins in Bavaria, cute straw dolls in Copenhagen and fuss about the right way to say minestrone after a package tour to Italy.

Yet because we speak the tongue that Shakespeare spoke, we go on as if the world was still waiting for us to tell it how to talk. That's what I find pathetic.

Of course there's such a thing as good English — clear, forceful, vivid, imaginative English. There's even such a thing as good grammar, though "good" tends to get equated with "old-fashioned" by those who haven't noticed that language has to grow like a plant, not just sit there looking pompous like a tombstone.

But it can be good Canadian, good Australian, good — if any Bostonian can admit such a thing — Californian.

True, too, that we do a fine line in language schools, teaching a standard BBC English for world use and attracting a tidy amount of foreign currency in the process. But to suggest that this has anything whatsoever to do with people trying to pass themselves off as English gentlemen, with being "U", is ludicrous.

Do you suppose, in Communist Hungary or post-Nazi Austria, there are one or two people, sitting in little rooms with the gilt peeling from the ceiling, who discuss earnestly whether Aunt Clothilde really is, or is not, a true Habsburg-Lorraine? It wouldn't be much more absurd than what we are doing now.

EDC Business Doubles in '78

OTTAWA (CP) — The Export Development Corporation more than doubled its volume of business last year, the president of the government agency has announced.

John MacDonald said in a press release the corporation, which promotes Canadian exports abroad, had a record business volume of more than $6 billion last year compared with $2.6 billion in 1977.

He attributed the dramatic growth to the increased competiveness of Canadian prices in world markets, the country's success in obtaining several large foreign contracts and the increased experience of Canadian businessmen in selling their goods and services abroad.

Preliminary figures indicate the corporation's 1978 profit will be significantly above last year's $18.7 million, MacDonald said.

During the year a total of 31 lending transactions, including lines of credit to foreign governments, were arranged for 20 countries, the press release said. These transactions were valued at $3.2 billion.

The corporation's insurance programs and foreign investment guarantees increased to more than $3 billion from a 1977 value of $1.5 billion.

The EDC now holds more than 800 export insurance policies protecting Canadian exporters against losses they might incur when selling in foreign countries.

Gov't 'Can't Be Trusted'

The Socred government's move to proclaim Section 11 of the West Kootenay Schools Collective Bargaining Assistance Act proves it can't be trusted, NDP leader Dave Barrett said Monday.

"I don't see how anyone could trust the word of any cabinet minister or the premier of this province after the performance on Section 11," he said.

The province, under cabinet orders-in-council made public Friday, declared in Section 11 that essential services will include all municipalities, public schools, universities, colleges, provincial institutes, regional districts and water improvement districts. The section becomes effective next Monday.

Barrett, who just returned from a short vacation, said the government order to hold down municipal taxes and Bennett's moves to block the sale of MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. to eastern interests were examples of Social Credit hypocrisy.

Barrett said the premier could be setting up the issues for a spring election, but added that the timing of an election will be decided by the premier's polltakers.

He said that like Prime Minister Trudeau, Bennett is "frightened to death of facing the people."

Meanwhile, a national labor leader has warned organized labor is entering its most troublesome time since the turn of the century.

Grace Hartman, national president of the Canadian Union of Public Employees told a special CUPE conference in Vancouver: "We're entering an era of confrontation with governments."

The CUPE conference was called to explain to representatives of CUPE locals in B.C. just what the Socred government's move to expand the jurdisdiction of the Essential Services Disputes Act means to them.

In order to combat such an assault, unions must keep their membership informed of what is happening, Hartman said.

"Somehow, we just have to bring about a high level of awareness of the dangers we face in 1979," she said.

"Somehow, they must understand that it's their jobs, their security and that of their families that is the issue — the end result of everything that's taking place."

Hartman said the move was a political ploy to try to whip up an election issue.

She said the B.C. action is only part of a national trend toward confrontation between governments and labor and said the time has come when trade unionists in Canada must make a calculated decision either to surrender their rights or "to stand tall and be counted.

"The political appeal to the public of crushing you as employees in the public sector just cannot be ignored," Hartman said.

She said earnings for workers in the public service increased 6.3 per cent before taxes in 1978 while for those in the private sector the increase was 7.8 per cent.

But, she said, the Toronto Globe and Mail in November said profits after taxes for chartered banks were up 29.6 per cent, for the transportation industry 50 per cent, communications 24.3 and food procesing 29.7 per cent.

"And here is one that should be of interest to the people in this province — paper and forest products, 94.3 per cent."

Village Puts Lie to Indian Stereotype

BELLA BELLA (CP) — This community about 480 kilometres north of Vancouver is part of an Indian reserve, but the pejorative stereotypes associated with that phrase disappear rapidly when one considers the following:

—The seven businesses owned by the Bella Bella band council in the year ended March 31, 1978, had a total cash flow of $1.5 million.

—The payrolls of the village's two biggest employers, the band council and the school board, are near $1 million.

—The Central Native Fishermen's Co-operative (CNFC) cannery returned profits of about $750,000 to Bella Bella workers this year.

It has been a headlong rush into the 20th century, however, and isolation has made the transition from backward outpost to progressive community that much harder.

The shipyard was built in 1972, the same year in which the community cable television system was established.

In 1973, the fuel distribution company was set up, and the following year a contracting company began operations.

A new store and a laundromat were built in 1974 and the 14-room Heiltsuk Hotel followed in 1975.

The idea of running commercial enterprises as viable business propositions just recently began gathering strength.

"We've introduced tighter accounting practices and are now operating the businesses according to more sound management principles," says band council manager Cameron Brown, 26.

"And it's starting to pay off. A year ago we had a $100,000 overdraft. Today, we have a $100,000 balance."

Many of the men own their own fishing boats, while others lease them from fish companies. Most of the men in the village work on the boats.

The CNFC cannery employs about 70 villagers during the summer salmon season and up to 110 during the spring herring season.

"We process around 2.5 million pounds of salmon a year," says CNFC general manager Eric Kremer from the co-op's head office in Vancouver.

"And from the herring, we get 240,000 to 400,000 pounds of herring roe, all of which is sold to Japan."

About half the cannery's salmon is sold for export, Kremer says.

A salmon enhancement program has been started to restore runs to their former levels, says Fred Carpenter, technical adviser for the five-year, $274,000 project.

Most of the money for capital investment still comes from federal and provincial government grants and loans, but band council members are interested in developments to make their village more self-sufficient.

Tourism is one area of potential revenue. The major cruise ships pass the village on their runs between Vancouver and Alaska.

Fishing Unions To Meet

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Representatives of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union and several Alaska fishing unions will meet here this weekend to discuss a range of issues including oil tanker traffic and foreign investment in the industry, a UFAWU spokesman said Monday.

Mike Darnell said the meeting was requested by the Alaskans, who also want to discuss labor organization and examine the structure of the UFAWU, which represents most fishermen and shoreworkers in British Columbia.

Darnell said the UFAWU is considered more powerful than the small and disjointed Alaska unions who want to become stronger for policical and economic reasons.

LAWYER AD BATTLE TO SUPREME COURT

Lawyer Don Jabour of North Vancouver has filed suit against the Law Society of B.C., saying its ban on advertising contravenes the federal Combines Investigation Act.

A law society committee had decided that the advertisements constituted action unbecoming a lawyer and recommended Jabour be suspended for six months.

He told the court Monday that he investigated legal clinics while chairman of the provincial Legal Services Commission between 1975 and 1977.

"It was unanimously accepted that there has to be advertising to make a legal clinic viable . . . to bring down prices while lawyers are able to make a living," he said.

The suit was expected to last three weeks.

More Doukhobor Fears

NELSON (UPC) — Doukhobor leader John J. Verigin will be tried on arson charges in late April and residents of central B.C. fear an escalation in the decades-long feud between two rival Doukhobor sects.

Verigin, 71, elected trial by judge and jury during a brief court appearance Monday at which three women supporters were ejected from the packed courtroom for attempting to strip in protest against the charges.

Members of Verigin's pacifist Spiritual Communities of Christ do not believe their spiritual leader could commit any violent act. Three women attempted to protest the legal action in traditional Doukhobor manner.

"Three women began (to strip) but were ejected before they could get started," deputy court registrar Michael Christian said. "The judge said at the beginning of the case that anyone attempting to strip would be thrown out of the courtroom."

Judge L.F. Keefer set a preliminary trial date of April 23, Christian said, because the prosecution requested an entire week to present its evidence and April 23 begins the first full week available on the court calendar.

"They said they needed a full week to present their case, so they must have a big one against him," Christian said.

Verigin was arrested by the RCMP last month and charged with conspiracy to set fire to the Sunshine Valley Co-op, the Union of Spiritual Communities of Christ Hall, the old post office and the home of Stefan Sorokin, who heads the rival Sons of Freedom Doukhobor sect.

Verigin's arrest followed an increase in acts of arson in the central B.C. regional district of West Kootenay, director Norman H. Brewster said. Arson has caused some $4 million damages there over the past four years.

AirWest Inquest Resuming

VANCOUVER (CP) — The inquest into 11 deaths in an AirWest Airlines crash in Coal Harbor last September will resume Jan. 22, Coroner Bernard Nash said Monday.

Nash said he has been forced to recall the inquest weeks before most participants are ready because of the availability of two key witnesses — the only survivors of the crash.

They are in Japan at the moment but will be in Vancouver to address the coroner's jury at that date for two days.

Minister to Visit

Nova Scotia Labor Minister Ken Streatch is coming to B.C. Friday to study the Social Credit government's multi-trade bargaining legislation to determine whether it can be used to end costly disputes in his province's construction industry.

Streatch and his deputy, R.E. Anderson, will spend a week in Vancouver and Victoria meeting with labor, government and industry officials as well as workers to get their views on the effectiveness of the legislation.

Boat Explodes

VANCOUVER (CP) — An 11-metre diving boat moored in False Creek exploded and burned Monday, scattering debris over a wide area and sending flames high into the air.

One man working on the boat suffered only singed hair and minor burns.

Talks Resume

BURNABY (CP) — Simon Fraser University and its striking office employees resumed contract negotiations Monday for the first time since mid-December.

Joan Wood, spokesman for the Association of University and College Employees, said the union has accepted the university's demand for a two-year contract.

The university had offered a two-per-cent wage increase in the first year and a four-per-cent increase in the second. Wood said the strike would be settled if the university offered more money.

The union had demanded a six-per-cent wage increase in a one-year contract.

Morphine Remand

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Eleven persons charged with conspiracy to traffic in morphine were remanded to April 9 when they appeared in provincial court Monday.

Preliminary hearings were set for April 9-12, 23-27 and May 7-11. No pleas were entered.

Man Stabbed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The body of Victor Jeffrey Nunn, 42, was found stabbed in his apartment Monday, police said. Police were continuing their investigation.

Harbor Chief Named

VANCOUVER (CP) — Captain Henry W. Vondette, a 28-year veteran of the Canadian Navy, Monday was apppointed harbormaster for the port of Vancouver.

He takes over the post left vacant by the recent resignation of Captain A. M. Ross.

Vondette, 54, a native of Pembroke, Ont., joined the Canadian Navy at age 17 and served on corvettes and frigates during the Second World War.

He was commissioned in 1948 and served aboard HMCS Cayuga during the Korean War. He served at Esquimalt from 1954 to 1956 and was promoted lieutenant-commander in 1958.

He co-ordinated the Queen's visit to British Columbia in 1959 and was aide-de-camp to former lieutenant-governor George Pearkes from 1960 to 1961.

A Happy Ending to Saanich Spud Saga

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Ian and Michael Vantreight will grow potatoes this spring on the Panama Flats acreage near Interurban Road, but they won't need to use municipal land to clear the flood-plain of water.

A letter containing that information was presented to Saanich aldermen Monday night.

It appeared to write the final chapter in the controversial saga of the Vantreights' trespass on Saanich property, where they had illegally built a concrete drainage basin.

The letter also effectively removes several weeks of uncertainty concerning the position of their father, Ald. Geoff Vantreight, on Saanich council.

He won't have to step down because the Vantreights now will not have to enter any lease arrangement with the municipality.

The Vantreight brothers said in the brief letter to council's bylaw enforcement committee that various hydrographic experts had advised them it would be possible to drain the fields by pumping surplus water out of the existing ditches, using pumps located solely on their property.

By this means the fields could be dried out early enough in the growing season to ensure a satisfactory potato crop, the letter stated.

The revised drainage plan avoids the necessity for using the drainage basin, which council has already ordered removed by June 30.

The so-called Panama Flats affair blew up in early November and Ald. Vantreight's specific role in it was the subject of several heated discussions.

But it all ended amid amity and goodwill Monday night, with his aldermanic colleagues wishing Vantreight senior success in the experimental potato-growing operation.

Mayor Mel Couvelier commented: "I am pleased to receive the letter and as far as I am concerned the matter would appear to be closed."

As the letter appeared to clear up Ald. Vantreight's eligibility to sit on council, Couvelier said, he would be reorganizing committee responsibilities later this month to assign more appropriate tasks to Vantreight.

In nominating committee chairmen last month Couvelier said he had intentionally bypassed the alderman until the question of his status on council had been resolved.

FIRE-PROOF CLOTHING 'TOO COSTLY'

To provide hospital patients who smoke with fire retardant clothing would be impractical and enormously costly, the head of supply services at Royal Jubilee Hospital says.

James Holden said such clothing would cost as much as 30 times more than the standard clothing. In addition it would be more uncomfortable for the patient because the cloth doesn't breathe.

Fire-proof chemicals are also impractical because the chemical only lasts until the next wash, he said.

Jones died from third degree burns he received on his right thigh after his bathrobe caught fire while he was smoking.

It was the second fatality in a week involving a patient inadvertently setting fire to his clothing. The other was James Pattullo, 63, who died Dec. 26 from burns inflicted six days earlier.

Jones was in acute care undergoing treatment for emphysema and bursitis, Jones' doctor, Dr. Kenneth Davidson said.

Nursing supervisor Elizabeth Maude-Moore told the jury smoking aprons are not normally issued to acute-care patients.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre adjourned the inquest to Jan. 16.

TAXES OWED, PERMIT HIT

Saanich Ald. Irene Block failed to convince council Monday night that the municipality should not grant a development permit to a company which owes Saanich $27,000 in unpaid taxes.

Block deplored the principle of awarding such a permit last week to Garr Management, one of the companies now being taken to court by Saanich for recovery of taxes.

She asked whether it is possible to revoke the permit or, in similar circumstances involving other companies, to stall approval indefinitely until the taxes are paid.

Interim municipal solicitor Chris Nation replied that he did not think either course of action would be permissible.

Other aldermen sympathized with Block but argued it would be difficult to differentiate between good and bad corporate citizens; between those who genuinely cannot pay and those who withhold payment as late as possible because — even with penalty rates added — it is still a form of cheap financing.

Ald. Geoff Vantreight said it makes sense to allow the firm to proceed with its development, so that it can earn enough to pay its overdue taxes.

"I think it's dicrimination of the worst kind to try and kick a guy when he's down," Vantreight added.

More than $6,000 worth of goods were recovered by police in weekend raid on Saanich home. Three 16-year-old boys have been charged and police are investigating involvement of two others.

Marina Study Put In Limbo

North Saanich Mayor George Westwood disagreed Monday with an advisory planning commission report recommending limited marina expansion and housing development in Tsehum Harbor.

The 30-page report was tabled and aldermen will meet Jan. 22 to decide whether to accept or reject it.

It involves a request by Bob Wright, president of North Saanich Marina Ltd., for permission to expand Bosun's Marina to 600 berths and to build 120 homes on adjacent land in the vicinity of Blue Heron Basin.

The area is considered an important refuge for migratory birds.

"We already did a socio-economic impact study on this and found there was no financial gain for North Saanich to go ahead with the development," Westwood said.

The report recommends:

That the municipality consider entering into an agreement with North Saanich Marina Ltd. to allow limited expansion of marina docking facilites in the area presently used. Any extension would be northwest around Whale Point and into Tsaykum Harbor, leaving intact the present treed shoreline.

The transfer to the public domain at no public expense of sufficient tracts of land that would protect in perpetuity the appearance of flora present in Blue Heron (Basin) and Tsaykum Harbor shorelines.

A petition against the proposed development was reacently signed by 1,460 people.

Good News, And Bad. . .

But down on the range — the nearby golf driving range, built at a cost of $250,000 last year — there seldom is heard the thwack of driver on ball.

And the skies, financially speaking, are cloudy all day.

The good news-bad news report was given to Saanich council's parks and recreation committee Monday night.

First the good news. The four-court tennis bubble opened Dec. 10 is proving a popular attraction.

Recreation manager Bill Young said it's getting about 50 per cent daytime use, 75 per cent in the evenings and 90 per cent at weekends.

Early indications are that monthly revenue will be around $6,000, which is "right on target for budget projections."

Now the bad news. According to Ald. Sandy Noel, the gold driving range hasn't been getting "the number of customers we had hoped for, by any stretch of the imagination."

To encourage better use of the facility, the committee accepted Noel's suggestion that rates be halved for the period to the end of March.

Immediate arrangements will also be made to install lighting for the area between the golf course car park and the range.

OAK BAY APPROVES NEW LIBRARY LEASE

Oak Bay council Monday night approved a lease for rental facilities for the Greater Victoria Public Library which now includes an option to purchase after 10 years.

Ald. Doug Watts, one of the severest critics of an earlier lease proposal, said a great deal has changed with the latest lease proposal and means municipalities won't be over a barrel when the 10-year agreement runs out.

At that point, he said, it would be more economical to purchase than lease and he was sure that councils then will pick up the option.

Ald. Neil Swainson, however, while agreeing the new proposal is much better than the previous one, said Oak Bay has two major commitments — sewage disposal and its share of the new hospital in View Royal — which will require almost $500,000 a year in taxes to meet. He was the only member of council to vote against the library lease, for space in the new government building on Blanshard near the Law Courts.

Mayor Brian Smith said the lease is subject to receipt of a $400,000 provincial grant this year and if that isn't made, the lease won't go ahead.

TOOL COMPANY EVICTED

Dorosz Industries Ltd., the company that planned to build a tool manufacturing plant in Saanich designed to eventually provide more than 300 jobs, was served eviction notice Monday.

A spokesman for Henry Eng, owner of the former Ste. Michelle winery on Quadra, said the eviction notice was served because the compamy had failed to honor rental commitments for December and January for the 30,000 square feet reserved in the building for the company.

He said the space is on the market today.

Nick Liberto, spokesman for the tool manufacturing enterprise, however, says the project will continue.

Liberto, who is in partnership with Dennis Dorosz in a venture to manufacture an innovative rockbit which they claim would revolutionize the drilling industry, says verbal agreements have been reached with investors for funds amounting to $2.2 million for purchase of equipment.

Eng's spokesman, however, said only a small deposit has been received from the company.

Greater Victoria development commissioner Barry Mayhew says he knew the company was facing eviction from the old winery building.

"The ball is in the firm's court. I've done everything in my power to help them locate here," he said.

Three Years of Silence Over for Sihanouk

Special to The Times

PEKING — When he first walked into the ante-chamber of the Great Hall of the People on Monday, he seemed like a very little man with a girth that was far too ample. Dressed in a dark grey cadres uniform, the preferred garment of Communist leaders in China, Vietnam and Cambodia, he could have been just another party functionary.

For three years he had lived like a recluse in the silent, nearly empty city of Phnom Penh, reading in his library and eating good food while his shortwave radio told of atrocities just outside his door, in the land where he once was king.

However, Prince Norodom Sihanouk kept his Chinese hosts and foreign journalist visitors dumbstruck for six hours Monday as he poured out his tale of life under the now ousted regime in Cambodia.

It was not only the longest press conference any of the veteran correspondents present could recall, it was perhaps the most dramatic and mind-boggling — another extraordinary chapter in the remarkable series of events that have been happening in Peking over the past few months.

Here was a man who had been out of all contact with the rest of the world for more than three years and the subject of the most intense international speculation.

Was he still alive? Had he been physcially assaulted? Reliable French journalists reported he was deaf. Intelligence sources in Bangkok insisted he was suffering from brain damage. For three years Sihanouk had obeyed his vow of silence.

During the same period the notorious regime of Communist party Premier Pol Pot won for itself the dubious reputation of being the world's worst human rights violator thanks to its policy of wanton killing and forced exodus into the countryside from all the cities of Cambodia.

"I like you very much, and I can stay with you three hours, four, five," he said Monday in the high-pitched voice that veteran journalists said had not changed since 1975.

He dispelled rumors that a stroke had rendered him speechless. "I have had three years of rest, so I can now have some exercise."

Just over a year ago, the fragile alliance between Cambodia and its fellow Communist neighbor Vietnam collapsed amid charge and countercharge. Since then, as it now seems clear, Vietnam has been working steadily to destroy the government in Phnom Penh and has now taken over most of the country.

Prince Sihanouk told more than 100 Chinese and foreign journalists that Pol Pot and the other Cambodian leaders were safe and well and in hiding along with a large segment of the Cambodian army. They have begun, he said, a protracted campaign of guerrilla warfare from mountain and forest bases to win back their country's "freedom and territorial independence from the Hitlerian Vietnamese aggressors".

Sihanouk said he could not tell anything about the killings and alleged massacres in Cambodia. He had not seen any.

When one journalist asked him if he would continue to support Pol Pot if he learned for certain about the massacres in the days to come, he groaned.

"That is a terrible question. I hate your question. I wish to avoid your question."

He didn't avoid it, of course. His answer turned out to be the emotional apex of the whole extraordinary meeting.

"What can I say about the killings. I did not see them. Naturally I did not see them. I have travelled around the country though. The people still smile and laugh. Even if the regime forced them to smile. We could tell it immediately if the smile was not natural. I know my people. I know their smiles. The killings, oh the killings, I just did not see them. If I continue to support Pol Pot it is because we must continue struggling towards total liberation. We have to think about this before anything else.

"My answer to you about this is that Sihanouk has no answer. It is the people who will decide this issue on human rights. If the people are satisfied with the Vietnamese aggressors and their puppet regimen if these aggressors restore the markets, allow the people to go to church for the pagoda, allow travel, don't force people to stay on the co-operatives let them have a family life and send letters abroad then they will not allow Pol Pot to come back and take power again. It is the Cambodian people who will answer your question."

As his story unfolded, journalists listened almost in disbelief as all their questions were answered fully, directly and with an honesty unusual anywhere in the world. He was prepared, he said, to defend the "Pol Pot team" for its patriotic external policy, but he in no way wanted to be associated with its internal policies of human rights violations and repressions.

Sihanouk...I did not see any killings

"I would like to see my people able to have freedom of travel ... These are basic rights I am talking about, very basic. The right to love and be loved, the right to choose a wife and husband freely and for them to be together with their children as a family. When Pol Pot organized the working people, it was good. The progress in agriculture was tremendous and in industry it was good ... I do not make propaganda for Pol Pot, he is not my friend but I do not want to criticize without justification."

He began his personal tale, and the unravelling of many mysteries associated with Cambodia, by describing the irony of his situation:

"I was virtually a prisoner for three years and suddenly I am here to represent them (the Communist government of Pol Pot) ... Mr. Pol Pot sent for me very suddenly on the night of January 5. I was listening to the voice of America broadcast when suddenly a car came, a black Mercedes limousine. I saw Mr. (Khieu) Samphan, president of the presidium and he said our leader wanted to see me.

"And so I left with him and found Mr. Pol Pot waiting for me at the Great Hall of the Government Palace. He was smiling a great deal. We embraced each other and he said we were in trouble because the Russians help too much the Vietnamese ... we have to retreat and it is time for you to help us in the diplomatic field. Will you do it?"

There was a great deal more to the prince's press conference. He talked about the nature of Chinese support to the Pol Pot underground government, the great hunger of Soviet aggression aided by Vietnam that would threaten the whole Asian Pacific area and ultimately the world, his preference for love songs over revolutionary ballads, his Buddhist faith, the fact that he was personally very well treated in Phnom Peh even though he was under "virtual house arrest."

He said he was disgusted with Vietnamese Premier Pham Van Dong who once expressed "eternal friendship" and promised Sihanouk several years ago that no matter what happened in the future he would make sure Vietnam respected Cambodia's territorial integrity.

He even launched into an attack on Communism which the Chinese took with good grace.

Personally, he said, he wanted now time to ponder in leisure a few new developments he had been unable to research in Phnom Penh, like the nature of the surface of Venus and the style of the new Polish pope.

But what really hurt him was the death of Chairman Mao Tse-tung. When Sihanouk arrived here Saturday, "Chinese friends said to me, 'A great part of the Chinese peoole were not happy when you kept quiet at the death of the great Chairman Mao. You were here five years, and we helped you a lot, and he died and you did not send any condolence to us.'

"You know, I have to tell you the truth about it. Imediately when we knew, after listening to the Chinese radio, we wept."

Italian Guerrillas Hit Radio Station

ROME (UPI) — Urban terrorists firing submachine guns and hurling fire bombs burst into the studios of an ultra-leftist radio today, wounding at least five persons in an attack that was heard over the air.

Police said the gumen fled after wounding five persons in the mid-morning attack at "City Radio of the Future," an FM station that represents the ultra-left.

Witnesses said three or four youths carrying submachine guns and hurling fire bombs shot their way into the station's studios as employees inside were broadcasting a program about feminism.

The initial phase of the attack was heard by hundreds of the radios listeners when one of the participants on the program began yelling into the microphone, "Help! Help! They're killing us all."

Then there was the sound of a violent explosion and the station went off the air.

"I saw a woman covered with blood running out into the street and yelling for help," said Mario Vertecchi, operator of a candy shop across the street from the studios.

Vertecchi said he ran into the street when he heard what sounded like pistol fire, then a burst of submachine-gun fire and finally the explosion.

Listeners of the radio station began calling police as soon as they heard the cries for help and sounds of the explosion and officers arrived at the scene only minutes after the attack.

A short time later, police found the small Fiat compact car used by the attackers that had been abandoned a short distance from the radio station.

Elsewhere in Rome, police reported a powerful time bomb damaged a music store and shortly after the explosion an anonymous telephone caller told the newspaper *Il Messaggero*it was set by a group calling itself The Communist Action Cells because right-wing youths often gathered at the shop.

ELF Releases Canada Pilot

KHARTOUM (Reuter) — Guerrillas have released a Toronto helicopter pilot held captive in the northern Ethiopian province of Tigre since Oct. 21, the Sudan news agency reported today.

The agency said the pilot, George William Krois, 36, was released because of the good offices of Sudan.

Krois was already in Sudan and was to be handed over to the U.S. ambassador later today, it said. Krois is a U.S. citizen.

Krois, employed by the Viking Helicopter Co. of Ottawa, under contract to the World Health Organization (WHO), was captured when he landed his helicopter in guerrilla-controlled territory to repair a light plane that had crash-landed there.

The plane was being used in a WHO locust-spraying program.

Krois and three Ethiopian technicians flying with him were seized by guerrillas of the People's Liberation Front for Tigre. He was later turned over to the Eritrean People's Liberation Front because the Tigre guerrillas said they could not guarantee his safety in the area they control.

The technicians were quickly released by the guerrillas who said they did not want to interrupt the locust-control program.

Krois, a former U.S. Army captain, has lived in Toronto for almost seven years.

Earlier, the guerrillas sent Mrs. Krois a letter saying they were holding her husband and would not mistreat him.

Canucks Capture Battle of Slumps

Times News Services

It could have been billed as the battle of the slumps.

Vancouver Canucks came into town with just one win in their last six National Hockey League games. On the road they had won one game in their last 10.

Toronto Maple Leafs' recent record was equally inept — five games without a victory and just four wins in their last 16 games.

On Monday night, however, it was a case of Toronto continuing its slump and the Canucks coming out of theirs as Vancouver easily defeated the Leafs 5-1.

In the only other game scheduled, Montreal Canadiens downed Minnesota North Stars 3-1, with the Canadiens' Guy Lafleur scoring his 29th goal of the season into an empty net in the final minute to extend his consecutive-game point string to 21 games.

Canucks coach Harry Neale was, naturally enough, pleased with the victory and satisfied with his club's performance in its sixth successive road game. Twelve of Vancouver's last 14 games have been away from home.

"We played a good game in Montreal (2-0 loss Saturday) and had an opportunity to win it and couldn't score," he said. "As the road trip wore on, we got better when you would have thought we would be getting tired."

Neale got top performances Monday from left winger Don Lever, who scored twice, and goaltender Glen Hanlon, who stopped all but one of the 26 shots he faced.

"We've got a young team and when you get an enthusiastic group going and get a bounce or two, you can win some games," the Vancouver coach said.

The Leafs were inept in just about every phase of the game. They showed little consistency or motivation on offence and were caught out of position time and again on defence.

"We couldn't have played much worse than we did tonight," said a despondent Roger Neilson, coach of the Leafs.

After a scoreless first period, Lever connected for a power-play goal at the 53-second mark of the second period, picking up a rebound off a shot by Harold Snepsts.

Bob Manno's first goal of the year proved to be the winner when he beat Paul Harrison on a two-on-one break. Stan Smyl increased the count to 3-0 before the period ended.

Lever scored his second of the night and 15th of the year at the 5:47 mark of the third period and Ron Sedlbauer scored his 27th of the year near the end of the game. Jimmy Jones accounted for the Leafs' lone goal at 10:54 of the final period.

Outside the Leafs' dressing room, Neilson fielded questions in a quiet voice.

"Before the game, the guys really seemed to be up for it," he said, choosing his words carefully. "But we didn't play it smart enough. We had mental lapses. The guys were pressing too hard and were getting caught."

"I've tried every possible way to pull us out of it (the slump) but nothing seems to work."

And for the first time since Toronto started its tailspin, he touched on the possibility of his own departure.

"I have faith in our team as it is now," he said. "However, you can only go so long before management feels the pressure and some changes have to be made. Hopefully we'll snap out of it before that time comes.

ONE WAY TO STOP Guy Lafleur of Montreal Canadiens is exhibited by Al McAdam of Minnesota North Stars in National Hockey League game in Montreal Monday as he upset Lafleur with sliding check. Lafleur scored in Montreal's 3-1 victory to extend to 21 games his consecutive game point streak.

Bruins Release Mike Walton

BOSTON (AP) — Centre Mike Walton has been released from his second stint with Boston Bruins and Walton, 33, says his release from the National Hockey League team came as no surprise.

"I knew it was more or less a month's trial for me," he said. "I thought I could help, but it takes a while to get into playing form."

Walton was brought up from Boston's minor league team in Rochester when regulars Bobby Schmautz and Wayne Cashman were injured. In 14 games, he collected four goals and two assists.

The Bruins picked up the veteran centre this season after he was released by St. Louis Blues.

To Vikettes: Well Done . . . All 66 Games of It

THREE YEARS AND 66 GAMES later it all came to an end. That was a remarkable winning streak which was established by the University of Victoria Vikettes in the Canada West University Athletic Association and which was halted by Alberta Pandas on the weekend. Not once, but twice, the Vikettes tumbled. After losing the first one, the second defeat was perhaps understandable. Foul trouble caused the first, then there was the letdown. No other team has ever matched this total and it will likely stand for years to come. Some players went through their entire college careers without tasting defeat in a league game. What a story to tell their children and grandchildren. It is not often in this age that any team manages to go through one campaign undefeated — let alone three — and all those responsible are to be congratulated on the effort with an extra big pat on the back to the former Vikettes' coach, Mike Gallo, for getting it all started and keeping it going. Now the pressure is off and Vikettes can get back to the business at hand, starting another streak, which hopefully will lead to a playoff championship, the one major bauble that has escaped the club so far. The Vikings got theirs as well, losing to St. Mary's Huskies in the Calgary Classic, in overtime, in a game that should have been won in regulation time. So the Vikes and the Huskies are all even this year, and very close too, which augurs well for what's ahead in the CWUAA schedule. And it would appear that coach Ken Shields has his troops in fine fettle for the league activities ahead . . . and maybe a rematch with the Huskies in the nationals later on.

IT'S DALLAS AGAINST PITTSBURGH and pick one in the National Football League Super Bowl two weeks hence. Both teams were more than slightly superior to their foes in the AFC and NFC finals on Sunday. Terry Bradshaw, who got out of a sick bed to lead the Steelers to that surprising result over Houston, picked the Oilers apart in a remarkable passing display on a terrible day for ball handlers of any kind. Roger Staubach, on the other hand, was almost — but not quite — as impressive for Dallas in a game in which defence predominated. The Dallas-L.A. game wasn't really as one-sided as the final score indicated and actually it was the Dallas defence that won the day, not the offence. The Rams were still much in the game until the third period when quarterback Pat Haden went out with his busted thumb.

Now the questions are: Can the Steelers shut down Tony Dorsett of the Cowboys as they did Earl Campbell of the Oilers? And can the Cowboys find a way to stop Bradshaw throwing crossing patterns to Lynn Swann and John Stallworth? Campbell was the key to the Houston ground game and the best rusher in the league all season and he went nowhere against the Steelers. Then, of course, there was that improbable 17-point outburst by the Steelers in the last 52 seconds of the first half that put the issue out of reach and just when it seemed the Oilers might be getting back in business. An interception and two fumbles did the Oilers in on a day which the best team obviously won.

Dallas, meanwhile, completely destroyed the Ram running game when John Capalletti was knocked out with a separated shoulder early; and then took care of the passing game (and Haden) by intercepting five passes. One resulted in an immediate touchdown and two of the others led to major scores. One thing is certain in what must be the best matchup (on paper) in recent years. Both clubs are quick to take advantage of any breaks that come their way. Who will win? That will come later.

AND OTHERWISE, the Vancouver Canucks may be having their problems, but Saturday night's show on TV against Montreal Canadiens had to be one of their high points, even in defeat. The thought here was that goalkeeper Glen Hanlon deserved consideration as one of the game's stars. It certainly wasn't a completely Canadien show as the game picks indicated. Meanwhile, the Canadiens may be hurting more than realized. Injuries have taken a heavy toll and the thought struck: what if Guy Lafleur hadn't been on the ice Saturday — wouldn't they have been just a good team instead of a great one? Maybe, but it's folly not to take them seriously and, as for Lafleur, he is pure talent and a treat to watch . . . Also, an informant suggests that people who aren't showing up at the DataTech Northwest League games are missing some excellent pro-type shooting and maybe the best basketball in some time. DataTech and Seattle Brewster put on a double wing-ding and match it if you can. The two clubs totalled 490 points, 245 each, in the two games and each came away with a one-point decision. And sure Bob Burrows missed a couple of free shots that would have given DataTech a win in the second, but, as been said before: you can't make 'em all and who wants to spoil a good story? Bob can be forgiven as he has won more than a few games in the past few years, and will do so again. And, speaking of championships (Vikings, et al), DataTech, it would appear, might be sticking their oar in the national bucket again this time around. Their stats are impressive and so is the team.

Canadian Ski Team Appeals

Swiss Supplier Baffled

CRANS-MONTANA, Switzerland (CP) — Ken Read wasn't given much time to savor his second downhill victory of the World Cup ski season and no one feels worse about the Calgary skier's disqualification Monday than the Swiss manufacturer of his controversial ski suit.

"This must be a manufacturing accident," Hans Hess told reporters Monday after it was announced by director Gian Franco Kasper of the International Ski Federation (FIS) that Read had been disqualified because the suit he wore in winning Sunday's race at Morzine, France, violated World Cup regulations.

Hess said the suits were made of the same cloth he used for the Swiss team's suits.

With the disqualification, Steve Podborski of Toronto, who had posted the second-fastest time Sunday in his regular suit, was awarded first place, with Herbert Plank of Italy — who had lodged the protest — moving into second spot.

The suits worn by the 23-year-old Read and clubmate Dave Murray of Abbotsford were seized following the Italian protest and FIS tests revealed the material used in the suits did not offer sufficient wind resistance.

Murray, who had finished 12th in the race, was also disqualified.

Even Kasper expressed astonishment at the laboratory findings. He said that at regulation permeability, air can easily be blown through the suit material. He said he had examined the suits personally, applied this amateur test "and it looked okay to me."

Under FIS rules, the material of a racing suit must allow the passage of at least 50 litres of air per square metre per second.

"I was very surprised with the decision," Read said Monday. "In my opinion, the suit was legal. The manufacturer told us it was. I wouldn't have worn it otherwise."

Canadian team officials immediately appealed the disqualifications, saying they had acted in good faith and had been assured by the manufacturer that the suits were of the same type used by the Swiss team.

Read's disqualification cost him 25 points in the World Cup standings, dropping him to fifth place from third. Podborski moved into ninth place, his first appearance in the top 10.

Meanwhile, veteran Christian Neureuther of West Germany scored his first World Cup victory in five years today, capturing the men's special slalom.

Petar Popangelov of Bulgaria finished second and Italy's Karl Trojer was third.

In the opening run, Swedish star Ingemar Stenmark was eliminated when he suffered what was believed to be his first fall in World Cup competition in more than two years.

Neureuther, 29, was in eighth place after the opening run.

CONSISTENT goal-scorer during Czechoslovakian under-18 team's tour of British Columbia, Miroslav Majernik (above) will face another challenge Thursday when European squad tackles Victoria Cougars of Western Hockey League in exhibition game in Memorial Arena at 8 p.m.

Rice Signs Richest Red Sox Contract

BOSTON (AP) — Jim Rice, the American League's most valuable player in 1978, is baseball's latest millionaire, and Boston Red Sox are bracing for a new wave of salary demands from their other high-priced stars.

Rice, the 25-year-old outfielder whose slugging dominated the sport last season, agreed to a seven-year contract Monday calling for more than $5 million.

Rice's annual salary of more than $700,000 doesn't make him the highest paid player in baseball but jumped him from the rank-and-file—at about $125,000 a year—to the stratosphere of baseball salaries.

"I guess every player wants to be the richest in pro baseball," said Rice at a news conference at Fenway Park. "I don't worry about what other players make. I just want to be an every day ball player."

The contract agreement was unveiled by general manager Haywood Sullivan, accompanied by vice-president Buddy Leroux. Rice was shepherded by his agent, Tony Pennacchia, who dickered with Sullivan off and on for nearly a year.

Rice led the major leagues in home runs with 46 and runs batted in with 139 while batting .315 last season. He was under contract for 1979 and his option season of 1980. Sullivan, thus, effectively renegotiated Rice's pact and exended it through the 1985 season.

The general manager conceded that he is concerned with new demands from other Red Sox players, but added, "I'd rather sign Rice than worry about the others."

Rice's deal makes him the highest-paid Red Sox player, ahead of right-handed pitcher Mike Torrez, who signed for about $600,000 as a free agent in 1977, and veteran Crl Yastrzemski who earns less than $300,000 a year.

The Rice contract has a no-trade provision for several seasons but does not include incentive clauses that would provide bonuses based on future performance.

Sullivan called Rice's contract the longest and richest in Red Sox history, but it apparently is somewhat shy, on an annual basis, of the $3.2 million four-year contract signed by free agent Pete Rose with Philadelphia Phillies.

FLAG CONFLICT STILL PROBLEM

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — German Rieckehoff Sampayo resigned Monday night as president of the Puerto Rico Olympic committee because of a continuing conflict over flags and national anthems at next July's Pan-American Games.

Gov. Carlos Romero Barcelo insisted that the United States flag be raised and the U.S. anthem played along with those of Puerto Rico at the Games' opening and closing ceremonies.

The Olympic committee and the Pan-American sports organization, which sponsors the Games, wants only the Puerto Rican banner and anthem to be used.

Although a U.S. territory, Puerto Rico has participated independently in international sports since the 1940s.

A compromise was announced Saturday in which both the U.S. and Puerto Rican flags and anthems would be used in an "official state ceremony" before the inaugural ceremony, in which only the Puerto Rican banner and anthem would be used.

All other systems are go for the Games, a 22-sport spectacular expected to draw more visitors to this Caribbean island than it has facilities to handle.

Arturo Carrion, president of the Pan-American Games Organizing Committee, says his group is was considering options that include hiring ocean liners to handle the estimated 10,000 visitors expected for the Games.

Leaders Boost Victory Streak

Gord Hoshal and Dean Sawyer pumped in 16 points each Monday night to lead unbeaten Strathcona Ivy's to a 78-66 victory over Trilec Installations in Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League action at Victoria High School.

In the other game, Techline Copy Centre toppled second-place Victoria Athletics, 86-80.

Ivy's, with a 10-0 record, grabbed a 48-30 lead at half time and held on in the second half as Trilec, now 2-8, rallied to outscore the league-leaders, 36-30.

Brian Sutherland-Brown and Lorne Dakin also hit double figures for Ivy's with 11 and 10 points, respectively. Darrel Johnston and Art Plewes set the pace for Trilec with 16 points each.

SHIELDS AND LOUIE TAKE SKATE TITLES

CALGARY — Three members of the Esquimalt Speedskating Club, all recently named to the team that will represent British Columbia at the Canada Winter Games in Brandon, turned in sparkling performances at the weekend's Alberta Open outdoor championships here.

Brenda Shields captured the juvenile girls' over-all championship after winning all four events she entered.

Wilson Louie was first in three events to easily win the junior boys' division while Esquimalt clubmate Rod Phillips was runner-up with three second-place finishes and one third.

Hoop Game Cancelled

An international women's basketball game between University of Victoria Vikettes and a team from Queensland, Australia, scheduled for tonight has been cancelled.

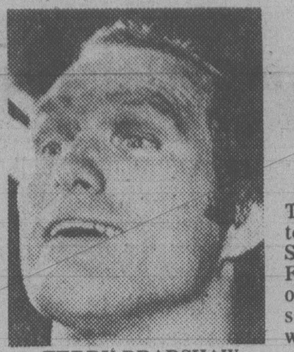
Bradshaw Wins MVP Award



TERRY BRADSHAW
. . . winner in close vote

NEW YORK (AP) — Terry Bradshaw, who quarterbacked Pittsburgh Steelers to the National Football League's best record during the regular season and into the Super Bowl, was named the NFL's most valuable player today in a poll conducted by The Associated Press.

Bradshaw, who led the American Conference in passing and the league in touchdowns with a career-high 28, edged rookie running back Earl Campbell of Houston Oilers, 36 votes to 33, in the balloting by 84 sports writers and broadcasters, three from each NFL city.

Jim Zorn, the left-handed quarterback of Seattle Seahawks, was a distant third in the balloting with six votes, followed by Dallas Cowboys' quarterback Roger Staubach with four.

"Terry's play and statistics speak for themselves," said Steelers coach Chuck Noll. "Both were outstanding. He is deserving of any award.

"The players voted him MVP for two successive seasons and now this honor proves what a great player he is."

And Dick Hoak, Pittsburgh's backfield coach, added: "Terry has always been an under-rated football player. He's big, he's strong, he throws as well as anyone, he can run with anyone and he has matured to become an outstanding quarterback."

Bradshaw, an AP All-America as a senior at Louisiana Tech and the Steelers' No. 1 draft choice in 1970, completed 207 of 368 passes for 2,915 yards, a league-high average of 7.92 yards per pass, as the Steelers compiled a regular-season 14-2 record.

Blessed with a corps of receivers including Lynn Swann, John Stallworth and Randy Grossman, Bradshaw did not throw excessively. But when he did, he was rarely off target.

Against Buffalo Bills, he completed 14 of 19 passes, then did the same against Cincinnati Bengals. He hit on 13 of 18 against Atlanta Falcons, 16 of 23 against New Orleans Saints and 10 of 14 against Denver Broncos.

Campbell, the Heisman Trophy winner from the University of Texas, took the NFL by storm—winning the rushing title with 1,450 yards and scoring a league-high 13 touchdowns on the ground.

Zorn, often called a young Fran Tarkenton because of his scrambling techniques, led the AFC in passes, completions and yardage. He sparked the Seahawks to a 9-7 record, just shy of the playoffs in only their third year in the league. Staubach was the league's passing leader.

Campbell, Baker Make All-Pros in First Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Running back Earl Campbell of Houston Oilers and defensive end Al Baker of Detroit Lions, a pair of sensational rookies in the National Football League, were named Monday to the Associated Press 1978 all-pro team.

Pittsburgh Steelers had the greatest representation with four players — centre Mike Webster, quarterback Terry Bradshaw, wide receiver Lynn Swann and outside linebacker Jack Ham.

Bradshaw finished the season as the American Conference's leading passer and topped the league in touchdown passes with 28 while Swann was third in AFC receiving with 61 catches.

Delvin Williams of Miami, whose 1,258 yards was second in the AFC to Campbell's league-leading 1,450, was named the other starting running back.

Baker is the only member of the Lions on the select squad and one of only seven members from the National Conference to win places on the 25-man roster in voting by sports writers and broadcasters, three from each NFL city.

Three Denver Broncos were voted to the team — middle linebacker Randy Gradishar, cornerback Louis Wright and Rick Upchurch, the league-leading punt returner with a 13.7-yard average.

The other starting wide receiver is Wesley Walker of New York Jets, tops among the league's pass-catchers with 1,169 yards and a 24.4-yard average.

The tight end is Oakland's Dave Casper, second among AFC receivers with 62 catches. Steve Largent of Seattle, No.1 receiver in the conference with 71, and San Diego rookie John Jefferson are second-team wide receivers.

Two New England Patriots—tackle Leon Gray and guard John Hannah—were named to the starting offensive line, along with tackle Dan Dierdorf of St. Louis, the lone NFC starter on offence, and guard Bob Kuechenberg of Miami.

The rest of the starting defence is: end Jack Youngblood of Los Angeles Rams; tackles Randy White of Dallas and Louie Kelcher of San Diego; outside linebacker Robert Brazile of Houston; cornerback Willie Buchanon of Green Bay; strong safety Ken Houston of Washington and free safety Cliff Harris of Dallas. The two other specialists selected were place-kicker Pat Leahy of New York Jets and punter Ray Guy of Oakland.

Walsh Expected To Get '49er Job

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Bill Walsh, head football coach at Stanford, says he's "trying to make some decisions," but the university has called a news conference for today that is expected to pave the way for his hiring by the beleaguered San Francisco '49ers.

Walsh, 46, is expected to be named to replace head coach Fred O'Connor, fired Monday by the National Football League club. O'Connor lost his job, along with general manager Joe Thomas, after '49ers owner Eddie J. DeBartolo Jr. announced he was unhappy with the club's "total operation."

Contacted at his home, Walsh declined to comment on reports he had been tapped to return to pro football with the '49ers.

"I'm in a position where I'm trying to make some decisions," Walsh said. "It's a rather sensitive time."

But minutes later, Stanford athletic director Andy Geiger called a news conference, which is expected to announce that Walsh has been released from his contract with the university.

The '49ers posted a pitiful 2-14 record last season, worst in the team's history.

Stanford rang up a 17-7 record in two years under Walsh, including a Sun Bowl victory over LSU in 1977 and a Bluebonnet Bowl victory over Georgia this year.

In announcing the firings, '49ers owner DeBartolo said the franchise "has not progressed properly and I feel we must make changes to become more competitive."

State, City Join Bruins In Tributes to Bobby Orr

BOSTON (AP) — Bobby Orr, a still youthful National Hockey League legend, will be honored tonight by his former team — Boston Bruins — and by the commonwealth of Massachusetts and the city of Boston.

A series of tributes will be capped when the Bruins retire Orr's uniform No. 4 and raise it to the Boston Garden rafters prior to a Bruins exhibition game against the Wings of the Soviet.

Orr, 29, whose battered knees forced him to retire last fall, also will be honored by the Massachusetts legislature and Boston Mayor Kevin H. White.

His scoring rushes as a defenceman made Orr a perennial all-star. But he slipped out of Boston 2½ years ago when Bruins management declined to sign him to a new contract. He signed as a free agent with Chicago Black Hawks on June 24, 1976, but played infrequently.

Citing the knee problems, Orr announced his retirement as a player last Nov. 8, after scoring two goals and getting two assists during the current NHL season.

Last year, Orr played in only 20 games for Chicago, with four goals and 19 assists. He became an assistant coach with the Black Hawks and last month was elevated to assistant general manager.

A native of Parry Sound, Ont., Orr was only 18 when he arrived in Boston to help revive the stumbling Bruins. He helped guide the team to the Stanley Cup in 1969-70, Boston's first championship in 29 years.

Boston again won the Stanley Cup with Orr in 1971-72.

Orr made the NHL all-star team annually from 1968 to 1975 and set NHL records for assists in a single season, 102, most points by a defenceman, 139, and most goals by a defenceman, 46.

His career record includes 270 regular-season goals and 645 assists.

Orr led the NHL in assists, five times as a member of the Bruins and twice was the league-leader in total points.

During his Boston career, Orr won a variety of NHL awards, including the Calder Memorial Trophy as rookie-of-the-year in 1967, the Norris Memorial Trophy as top defenceman for eight consecutive seasons, the Ross Trophy as NHL scoring champion, the Hart Trophy as NHL MVP three times and the Conn Smythe Trophy as the most-valuable playoff player.

In eight playoffs, Orr scored 26 goals and had 66 assists.

EAST GERMAN TRACK STARS HAVE RETIRED

BERLIN (AP) — Olympic gold medalist Carla Bodendorf and several other East German track stars have retired, the East German news agency has reported.

Bodendorf, 25, was a member of the East German 4x100-metre relay team that won the 1976 event at Montreal and set the world record of 42.27 seconds last Aug. 19 in Potsdam.

Others retiring from competition include the 30-year-old hammer-thrower Jochen Sachse, silver medalist in the 1972 Olympics at Munich, and discus-thrower Siegfried Pachale, 29.

Fast Thaw Needed By British Soccer

LONDON (Reuter) — British soccer officials are working on a massive scheduling problem that was produced when snow and ice storms wiped out almost all of Saturday's schedule.

The freezing weather that has gripped Britain for the last week forced the postponement of all but six matches in England. The entire Scottish schedule fell victim to the elements.

Of the six English matches, four were in the Third round of the Football Association Cup and only Leicester City and Shrewsbury clinched places in the last 32.

First Division Arsenal, which confidently expected to make it to the fourth round, was held 1-1 by Sheffield Wednesday of the Third Division, while the Cup match at Stoke was abandoned at halftime with the home team leading Oldham 2-0.

Leicester's enterprising decision to cover its pitch with a plastic sheet puffed up by warm air was rewarded with a 3-0 victory over First Division Norwich. Shrewsbury beat Cambridge United 3-1 after winger Paul Maguire scored in the first minute.

Despite being held to the draw, Arsenal was quoted as the 10-1 second favorite by London oddsmakers to win the cup. Liverpool was made the 8-1 favorite.

The fourth-round draw will be a complicated affair. One match may have as many as five possible contestants with a second-round replay between Barnsley and Rotherham still undecided.

A fast and furious thaw is what is needed, but even if there is one, more postponements seem certain and the FA Cup may have to move back the fourth round, due to take place Jan. 27.

If this happens, the European championship matches involving England, Northern Ireland and Scotland on Feb. 7 will be threatened.

Those European countries which suspend soccer action during winter's harshest months can be excused if they are viewing Britain's predicament with a smug smile, while the manufacturers of Leicester's protective plastic sheet can be expected to step up their sales drive.

Seven From Province Picked in NASL Draft

NEW YORK (AP) — Njego Pesa was chosen by Dallas Tornado as the first of 97 players drafted Monday by North American Soccer League teams in their annual selection of college and high school athletes.

Pesa is a forward from Ulster, N.Y., Community College.

Adrian Brooks, a midfielder from Philadelphia Textile, was picked No.2 by Atlanta. Larry Hulcer, St. Louis University midfielder, was taken third by Los Angeles, and Jeff Durgen, a defender [illegible] Stadium High School in Tacoma, Wash., was drafted fourth by Cosmos, the defending league champions.

The 24 NASL teams selected 66 players from four-year colleges, four from junior colleges and 19 from high schools. In addition, eight of the 11 players who had petitioned the NASL as hardship cases requesting they be drafted, were selected. Any four-year college or junior college players who do not sign will be eligible for a second draft in the spring.

The Cosmos selected only Durgen, trading their other two picks to Houston and Toronto. Twenty-two players who performed in the recent Senior Bowl were picked. Seven players were selected from B.C.

Pesa, a native of Yugoslavia who attended high school in New York, said he was not sure he would sign with Dallas. He led Ulster Community College to two straight national titles.

Pesa said he might enroll at Hartwick College, despite Dallas having dealt Jeff Bourne, a striker who scored 21 goals last year, to Atlanta in order to secure the first pick.

Tornado coach Al Miller said: "Every effort will be made to sign him. He scored 27 goals two years ago and 26 last year. You can never tell how a player will develop. Much depends upon the team he joins, and we think the Tornado is just the right opportunity for Pesa."

"Everything will depend upon the offer I receive (from Dallas)," said Pesa. "I have to talk to Miller and Francisco Marcos."

Vancouver Whitecaps had two first-round picks, selecting forward Brent Barling of Vancouver and midfielder Darryl Buckham of Richmond, both high school players.

The Portland Timbers selected Bruce Gant of Simon Fraser University. Gant is the younger brother of the Timbers' Brian Gant.

Gant, a defender, stands 5-foot-11 and weighs 150 pounds. In his four years at Simon Fraser, the Clansmen never finished lower than fifth in National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics playoffs. They won the NAIA soccer title when Gant was a sophomore.

Toronto Metros-Croatia used its first pick in the third round to select forward Lou Nagy of Hamilton, a member of the Canadian national youth team.

Other selections by the Whitecaps were: midfielder Allan Sabbro, South Burnaby; defender Gord Creamer, Simon Fraser University; midfielder Pat Rohla, Simon Fraser.

Other Toronto picks were: forward Gord Miller, Georgetown, Ont.; forward Peter Van Beek, Brown University, R.I.; forward Grahame Coulton, Montreal; midfielder Damian Ogunsuyi, Clemson; defender Paul Stevenson, Brown U; midfielder Medrick Innocent, University of Connecticut; goaltender Chris Beaudoin, California.

Dallas also selected Dave Taylor, a midfielder from Simon Fraser.

Participate in Canada's Employment Tax Credit Program.

The Employment Tax Credit Program was introduced by the Government of Canada to stimulate employment in the private sector.

In essence, we're encouraging you to expand your work force by providing a tax break for your business.

The potential annual tax credit for each new employee is over $3,000. And there is no limit to the number of new employees you can hire.

Now, by using the experience we've gained so far, we've changed the program to make it even more attractive.

Up to 33⅓% more tax credit.
The maximum term for the tax credit has been increased from nine to 12 months for each new employee. That means up to 33⅓% more tax credit.

Greater eligibility.
We have expanded the number and types of businesses eligible to benefit. Now almost every business that's been operating in Canada for a year or more can join in.

Wider choice of new employees.
Now, almost anyone who's unemployed and registered at a Canada Employment Centre for a minimum of two weeks is eligible.

A minimum of red tape.
We've simplified the procedure, so you can do the whole thing, from beginning to end, with just two single-page forms.

For full details on the program, contact any Canada Employment Centre, Canada Manpower Centre.

Housing-Start Data Fails to Encourage

OTTAWA (CP) — Total housing starts dropped to about 223,000 units in 1978, down more than 20,000 from a year ago, and experts say an expected further drop this year means little help for the lagging economy.

High mortgage rates, lower immigration, a large inventory of completed but unsold housing units and generally uncertain economic conditions all point to a further slowdown in this important sector of the construction industry.

Officials at Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation (CMHC), which released the preliminary totals for 1978 on Monday, say housing starts next year will be in the 210,000- to 215,-000- range.

That means there will not only be fewer jobs in the construction industry, but there will be slower demand for the building materials, furniture and appliances that new homes require.

The Housing and Urban Development Association (HUDAC), an organization of the country's major builders, estimates that each new housing unit provides one man-year of direct employment, or work for one man for one year.

The drop in housing starts in 1978 to 223,000 from nearly 246,000 in 1977 means an average loss of 23,000 direct construction jobs.

Following are some of the key factors influencing over-all demand for housing this year:

— INVENTORY: There now are more than 25,000 unsold new housing units on the market, more than half of them row and condominium high-rise units.

HUDAC says this inventory has been diminishing as builders slowed up construction.

But a generally high number of unsold units means starts will slow again this year.

— MORTGAGE RATES: Interest rates now are about 11 to11.25 per cent, up a full percentage point from last spring.

Although the supply of mortgage money is plentiful, these rates can be expected to creep up further in the next few months at the urging of the Bank of Canada which has raised its bank rate seven times in the last year to signal higher rates.

High rates deter some potential purchasers and push costs out of reach for others.

MoT REJECTS UNION CLAIMS

OTTAWA (UPC) — Transport Canada has rejected claims by federal aviation inspectors that air travellers are in danger because there are not enough of them to check even a quarter of the country's air violations.

Union spokesman Ed Jensen said Monday that "due to shortages in staff, fewer than 25 per cent of more than 1,500 violations to Canada's air regulations were investigated by the federal government in 1978."

"It appears that we are inept in executing our duty to assure flight safety in Canada," he said.

Jensen said violations included pilots working without licenses — sometimes under the influence of alcohol or narcotics — flying into airports that do not meet even basic safety standards and taking off with overloaded aircraft.

The public, he said, assumes airlines, airports, pilots and navigational aids "meet stringent safety standards — but this is simply not true. In fact, airport inspections are infrequently made, if at all, and some air carriers are never inspected."

Transport Canada officials rejected the claim saying more than 80 per cent of Canada's air violations were investigated last year.

"Of the approximately 1,030 registered air violations in Canada in 1978, 830 were investigated and were actioned," a transport spokesman said. "I don't know where the union got the figure of 1,500."

Jensen said Flight International magazine reported this month Canada's aviation safety standards had seriously declined and the fatal accident rate during the past five years was three times that of the 15 leading nations surveyed.

Transport Canada's more than 400 pilots and aviation inspectors walked out Friday to back wage demands. The Public Service Staff Relations Board ruled the strike was illegal Saturday because the union had changed bargaining agents after the last contract was signed.

The Canadian Union of Professional and Technical Employees said it would seek to have the ruling overturned in the Federal Court of Appeal.

Two young St. John residents make the best of flooded situation

Old Man Winter Throws Bit Of a Tantrum in the Maritimes

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — Flooded streets and basements in this city, slippery roads further north and east and intermittent power failures in many centres resulted from a storm Monday which dumped 80 millimetres of rain here, 35 centimetres of snow in Chatham, N.B., and varying amounts of freezing rain in between.

The storm also reached into Nova Scotia, causing minor power failures in Halifax-Dartmouth area and dropping 30 millimetres of rain which flooded basements and some roads in the Amherst area near the New Brunswick border.

Firemen were called to about 40 homes in Saint John to pump basements and three streets were closed because of flooding.

In Fredericton, schools were closed and police advised motorists to stay off the streets as 28 millimetres of freezing rain fell throughout the day.

Moncton also was hit with freezing rain and streets were described by police as slippery.

A spokesman for the New Brunswick Electric Power Commission said power failures were reported in eight southern New Brunswick communities, with some areas hit more than once as the storm broke branches from trees.

Power commission employees were to work through the night to repair the damage, the spokesman said.

Police reported few problems in the northeastern New Brunswick where 15 to 35 centimetres of snow fell.

About 15 centimetres more snow was forecast for today in the northern part of New Brunswick and snow flurries were forecast for southern New Brunswick and mainland Nova Scotia.

Itinerary Includes Mortgage Interest

OTTAWA (FP) — Four members of parliament, representing the three major federal parties, will visit Washington, D.C., in early February to review the American experience with the tax treatment of home ownership, including the controversial business of making mortgage interest payments tax deductible.

The four MPs are Jean Pigott (PC—Ottawa Carleton), Bill Clarke (PC—Vancouver Quadra), Robert Rae (NDP— Toronto Broadview), and Donald Johnston (L—Westmount).

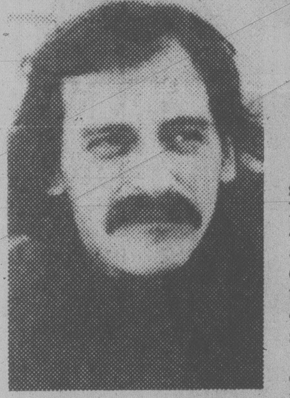
Peter Dobell, executive director of the Parliamentary Centre for Foreign Affairs and Foreign Trade, a non-profit organization which is sponsoring the three-day trip, said Monday it was designed to help MPs make up their minds on the issues involved in home ownership taxation.

The trip is being financed by funds obtained from foundations in the United States, Dobell said.

The MPs will meet with a wide range of persons involved in of housing and urban development, including congressional committees.

For the past 10 years, the centre has been operating such parliamentary tours with privately-raised funds, Dobell said.

Opposition Leader Joe Clark promised last year that a Conservative government would allow a tax deduction for mortgage interest payments.



JACQUES LANCTOT, 33, was charged Monday with the October, 1970, kidnapping of British trade commissioner James Cross. A bail hearing was set for today. Lanctot will also face charges arising from an alleged plot to kidnap Israeli diplomat Moshe Golem in 1970.

Gay Advocate Praises Article

TORONTO (CP) — A spokesman for the Canadian Lesbian and Gay Rights Coalition testified Monday that an article in the Body Politic describing homosexual relations between adults and children was published to stimulate discussion.

David Garmaise said that discussion was stifled by criminal charges laid against those responsible for the publication.

Garmaise, 31, was the last witness called by the defence at the trial of Pink Triangle Press, publisher of the newspaper, and three of its officers, Gerald Hannon, 74, Kenneth Popert, 31, and Edward Jackson, 33. They are charged with using the mails to transmit indecent, immoral or scurrilous material.

The article, "Men Loving Boys Loving Men" was published in the December, 1977, issue of the Toronto newspaper.

Provincial Judge Sydney Larris adjourned the case until next Tuesday when the defence and the Crown will make their final arguments.

Garmaise said the article was meant to tell homosexuals they must not discriminate against other homosexuals of whom they don't necessarily approve.

He said he felt the article was not meant to encourage pedophilia but to encourage an understanding of pedophiliacs.

Rev. James Reed, a psychologist and Anglican priest, said the article did not advocate pedophilia.

VALENCE VERDICT APPEAL SET

MONTREAL (CP) — The prosecution will appeal a Quebec Superior Court jury verdict acquitting Claude Valence of kidnapping credit union official Charles Marion, a senior Quebec justice official said Monday.

Francois Tremblay, assistant deputy justice minister of justice, said Crown prosecutor Pierre Sauve is preparing the appeal against the decision to acquit Valence on four charges — conspiracy, kidnapping, forcible detention and extortion against the Marion family.

Valence, who faces a maximum prison term of 14 years for attempted extortion, is scheduled to be sentenced Jan. 19.

During the three-month trial, the defence argued that Valence, an unemployed former game warden, should be acquitted on the four charges because of the suspicion that Marion took part in his own kidnapping.

We Play More Than We Work

OTTAWA (CP) — A typical working adult spends 50 hours a week in leisure activities compared with less than 40 hours in the workplace, a Statistics Canada survey shows.

The study shows that during a selected study week in 1978, adult Canadians spent almost one billion hours in measured leisure time activities while spending about one-third that amount of time as members of workforce.

However, 45 per cent of those questioned for the study were not members of the workforce.

AirCan Pilots Sign 2-Year Contract

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada and its 1,750 pilots will soon sign a new two-year contract that will boost the pilots' salaries by 8⅜ to 16 per cent in the first year of the agreement with increases ranging from 8⅜ to 11 per cent in the second.

The pilots have already ratified the contract, which will bring their average salary, including fringe benefits, to between $47,000 and $50,000 by November, 1980. They now earn an average of $40,000.

In return for the salary increases, the pilots have agreed to raise the monthly ceiling on flying time to 80 hours from 75 hours for four months a year. The national carrier says this will give it greater flexibility in scheduling and increase its sales and profits.

With the extra hours, Air Canada will be able to schedule more flights at peak periods without hiring as many new pilots as it had planned.

The pilots have also agreed to a new pay formula. Under the old contract, they were paid in combination of a monthly flat rate and hourly pay, but as an incentive to fly maximum hours they will be paid at a straight hourly rate.

And while they get four additional holidays, they have agreed to take cash for the extra days to avoid lowering the amount of flying time.

INSULIN COST GOING UP 6%

TORONTO (CP) — Diabetics will have to pay almost six per cent more for insulin this year than in 1978, says the president of Connaught Laboratories, Canada's sole supplier of insulin.

Dr. William Cochrane said in an interview Monday that the increase — the first in two years — is a result of increased labor, equipment and supply costs.

Cartoon Called Malicious

June 22 Times including the cartoon, Vander Zalm agreed there was a critical editorial which also included some good comments about him.

He agreed one paragraph in the editorial accused him of depriving young people of freedom of movement. But when asked if he saw a connection between that and the wing-clipping cartoon, he said: "I hadn't thought of that."

Vander Zalm agreed he has heard opposition members in the legislature saying some of his policies were cruel and that he was unfit to be minister of human resources. However, he said the public knows the source of those comments and he had the opportunity to reply in the house.

He did not equate such behavior with the cartoon.

He agreed there have been editorials suggesting he was cruel and insensitive as minister of human resources but he did not accept this opinion because it was not fair.

Asked in what way his character has been seriously injured, as he has alleged in his suit, he said a person in public office must do whatever he can to maintain his reputation and the cartoon made this more difficult.

When Mr. Justice Munroe suggested it would not assist a politician to be depicted as cruel, he replied: "That's for certain."

Referring to media criticism of him, Vander Zalm said there have been cartoons which are looked on as exaggerations of fact but they related to something that people could relate to. He said this particular cartoon did not relate to anything.

He agreed he has been a politician for 14 years, in municipal and provincial fields, and that he has a high profile and is very much in the public eye.

He was referred to numerous actions and comments during his three years as minister of human resources.

Among them was a restatement of a regulation requiring welfare recipients available for work to be properly groomed and attired, remarks that able-bodied welfare recipients should be prepared to pick up a shovel and work, cut-off of funding for various community groups, tightening of regulations for handicapped recipients of welfare, asset tests, comments that unemployment insurance should be reduced for young people and a comment to the effect that native Indians should be returned to reserves where there is more opportunity for them than in downtown Vancouver.

He said his ministry was concerned at the influx of native Indians into the downtown area, that they were sleeping under bridges and applying for welfare, and concerns were expressed to him that they would end up on drugs and alcohol and become engaged in prostitution.

Vander Zalm was the only witness called on his behalf but his lawyer, Rodney Taylor, reserved his right to call rebuttal evidence after hearing the defendants evidence which was to begin today.

At the end of Monday's testimony, Taylor read in certain parts of the transcripts of the examination for discovery, a pre-trial hearing.

In them, Bierman said he draws three cartoons a week for the Times according to the news he thinks is interesting. He was thinking about Vander Zalm's remarks about Indians going back to the reserves when he drew the cartoon in question as well as the "whole build-up" of the minister's image in his cartoon.

Editor McLintock said she saw the cartoon in proof form the day it appeared in the newspaper. Asked if the cartoon depicted Vander Zalm in a cruel manner, she said: "Yes, very much, that was how I saw it." But she said she would not go as far as to feel that he was unfit to be minister of human resources.

In his opening remarks, Taylor said it was a somewhat unusual case because it was based on a cartoon which had no caption and there had been few court decisions about such cartoons. But he said it should be decided just as if it was a libel action based on words.

He said the natural and ordinary meaning of the cartoon constituted an imputation of improper and disgraceful conduct which, if true, rendered him unfit to hold office and was, therefore, defamatory.

Taylor said the defendants were not advancing the defence of fair comment on a matter of public interest in the usual way but rather were justifying the cartoon.

Don Farquhar, lawyer for the newspaper, said the defence of fair comment is being advanced. A political cartoon, by its very nature, is going to be very much subject to preconceived notions and attitudes of the reader in determining what impressions the reader drew from that cartoon.

He said the pleadings given by the defendants do not raise the defence of justification. A cartoon is clearly comment and nothing more, he said.

Instant Information Just by Dialling

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Instant information will be just a dial away next week for Victorians.

It will be available through a new dial-a-tape phone service developed by Consumer and Corporate Affairs Canada.

A prospective buyer of goods and services will be able to get expert advice on such diverse topics as preparing for a new baby, the best buys in meat or shopping for a mortgage just by dialling 592-1251.

A national pilot project of the federal consumer and corporate affairs department, INFOTEL has been launched for six months through a $5,000 contract to Health Information Services Library of Victoria and Vancouver.

Deputy minister Dr. George Post, visiting Victoria today, said the library operated by the Health Education Centres of B.C. covered health information of a wide variety, mostly aimed at preventative health care.

"We thought that they had a good idea and concept and arranged for them to play back recordings on some of the most important topics of consumer interest.

POST

"Instead of talking to a clerk, who may not have all the information or have wrong information, the consumer can get right into the library of information experts have put together."

It may be possible to provide in future a television display or printout of consumer information by means of a converter attachment.

Post said most of the information on some 140 tapes is aimed at prospective buyers, but the practical advice includes metric measure, planning a menu, and How to Make Money Grow.

Planning for retirement, solar heating, buying a condominium or a microwave oven, choosing a moving company and how to complain are listed with the more mundane how to buy a car, how to choose a range and how to buy shoes.

A user will dial the number, then ask the volunteer who answers to play the code number of the desired tape subject.

All tapes are listed by number and subject in a brochure available from the consumer services branch and will be published next month in the B.C. Telephone Co. pamphlet Dialogue, delivered with phone bills.

Man Facing Holdup Charge

Police said the suspect was picked up 30 minutes after a man wearing a nylon stocking mask and brandishing a handgun entered the L & N Food Market, 530 Craigflower, about 6:30 p.m. and forced proprietor Tom Lem to hand over money from the till.

The man grabbed $86 in bills and fled.

Police said a passerby saw the suspect run into a yard.

City officers, assisted by Esquimalt police, sealed off the area and flushed the suspect from a backyard in the 700-block Powderly. He gave up without a struggle.

Police said all of the money was recovered and a starting pistol seized.

By AB KENT
Times Staff

A man once acknowledged as a world leader in electronic armaments is getting back into the science of weaponry after 20 years of boycott by fellow Americans.

Donald W. Jacobs, 63, of Oak Bay, has been living in a vocational wilderness since 1958 when he ran afoul of the U.S. military-industrial establishment by criticizing the system for corruption and treason.

There was no scandal and he never recanted, still believing nothing changed as a result of his published indictment, A Scientist and His Experiences with Corruption and Treason in the U.S. Military-Industrial Establishment (1969).

But the blot against his name melted away just a year ago and the rewards have begun to trickle in with a few small Canadian defence contracts for computerized systems.

Jacobs, who last month was named a fellow of the world-wide Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers, finds it curious that although nothing official had ever declared him persona non grata as an American defence contractor, the stigma followed him over the 49th parallel when he came to start anew in Canada.

He said in an interview at his Beach Drive home that in 1958 he tried to participate in Canadian defence work at a time when the Bomarc missile system was being deployed and Gen. George Pearkes was defence minister. Pearkes told him he could not be considered because he was not security-cleared by the U.S.

He was also unable to get Canadian federal government contracts of an unclassified, non-military nature.

In an effort to have the block lifted, Jacobs wrote to President Carter and shortly after, in February 1978, the secretary of the navy replied there was no obstacle to him being considered for future contraets.

In most of his time here Jacobs has done private commercial or industrial consulting and analysis in the computer field, including some for the provincial government.

He won't give details about his work for the Canadian navy. But his military expertise lies in weaponry and guidance systems.

During the Second World War Jacobs developed a reputation in artillery fire control, following up with design of a bombsight for the U.S. Navy which led to more navy work.

With the Cold War and Korean War and heavy U.S. involvement, Jacobs was asked to bid on bombsight production for the navy department, meaning large capital investment.

Jacobs' troubles began when he tried to negotiate financing through a dollar-a-year man from General Electric acting in a procurement role for the U.S. government. A loan was refused by this man, who Jacobs said was in conflict of interest with GE, which also wanted the bombsight contract.

When Jacobs tried to make a deal with other firms willing to finance the venture, they wanted their own terms and offered only low-paying roles for Jacobs instead of a profit-sharing arrangement.

Jacobs said he could find no suitable financing and fell out of grace with the navy, which subsequently dropped its proposal.

When Jacobs' opposition to the procurement system became known the curtain fell on any further bidding opportunities.

Meanwhile, the navy successfully sued Jacobs for his bombsight technical data and when he tried to appeal the Internal Revenue Service stepped in with tax claims that wiped him out. The Jacobs Instrument Co. was seized, along with his and his wife's personal bank accounts.

They did not get funds secreted for a new start elsewhere. That and his ideas.

"What they couldn't get was locked up in my mind. It was the link of the system and it wasn't down on paper," Jacobs said.

After rejecting Australia as a new base, the Jacobs went to Vancouver and finally settled here as complete strangers.

It was difficult to start business in electronics without industry, government or academic contacts, Jacobs said, but he established himself through courses at the University of Victoria and joined the electrical and electronics institute, leading him toward computer systems design and analysis.

Today he is busy in an industry where universities are pressed to meet demand for computer specialists. Yet, he would like to resume work in ballistics.

"I'm primarily a weapons man," Jacobs insisted, tracing this interest back to boyhood when he began collecting vintage firearms.

A glance around his study walls confirms this passion is unabated. Glass cases contain pre-Civil War rifles and revolvers, dating to the present day and including sophisticated automatic weapons of Europe and North America.

During the Second World War Jacobs designed an anti-aircraft gun with muzzle velociy of 16,000 feet per second, then the world's highest, and saw it test fired in New Mexico.

He has worked as a physicist for such U.S. agencies as the Bureau of Standards, naval ordnance, the naval observatory, and North American Aviation, where he was section chief in its guided missile laboratory.

Jacobs was research project supervisor at the University of New Mexico and for 10 years ran his own research firm.

His election as a fellow of IEEE cites "contributions and technical leadership in electronic computers, aircraft navigation systems, missile range and guidance instrumentation, and aviation fire control." Recently, with small boaters in mind, he invented a self-correcting chronometer for celestial navigation.

Jacobs finds it hard to say what the future holds, hoping he might get back into electronic hardware rather than programming or software.

What if there had been no trouble with the American authorities?

"I would probably be the president and technical director of a very large corporation," he said.

Sidney Tugman, Partner Survive Freighter Crash

A Sidney man said today he and his partner spent 15 chilling minutes in the water after losing their tug boat in a collision with a French freighter near Lion's Gate bridge Monday night.

John Davies, 50, and his partner, 25-year-old Bruce Tenant, of Vancouver were treated for exposure when they were rescued from Vancouver's harbor.

Their 14-metre tug Storm Crest and the 166-metre freighter Telendos collided and the tug sank.

Davies, interviewed by telephone as he checked out of the Lion's Gate hospital at 10:15 a.m. today, said he and his partner are in good condition.

He refused to discuss the accident, however, which is under investigation by the National Harbors Board (NHB).

"We're both fine but I can't talk about it right now," said Davies.

"Maybe later. We're just going to go into the office now and find out what's going on."

Meanwhile, harbor officials had set up warning markers on the wreck which is sitting in 18 metres of water in the harbor's narrow entrance. The harbor will not be closed to deep-sea traffic.

Steven Ryback, a Transport Canada spokesman, said the steel-hulled tug and the freighter were outbound when the collision occurred about one kilometre east of Lions Gate Bridge.

The Telendos, bound for Seattle with general cargo in containers, anchored in English Bay after the incident. Marine surveyors will check its plates for damage today.

'No Flimsy' Report On School Problems

By
LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

An administrative report on allegations of serious maintenance problems in Greater Victoria schools must be much more than a "flimsy little piece of paper," Trustee Peter Yorke said Monday night.

The report must answer all charges of maintenance deterioration by a local parent group.

Yorke, elaborating today, said the board was embarrassed by publicity surrounding charges of school problems ranging from termites to a leaking roof and wants its name cleared.

Charges of specific maintenance problems were made in a letter to the board last month by the Confederation of Victoria Parents Associations (CVPA).

Since then publicity has made the charges a hot issue, Yorke said.

"If these problems exist we want to know why and what the administration is doing about them," he said.

Yorke said he has no idea what Stables plans to include in his report.

STABLES
. . . full report

"I just want to make sure its not just a flimsy little piece of paper," he said.

Stables was questioned by Yorke before a crowd attending the new board's first regular meeting.

Yorke said he wants to know if Stables was aware of the maintenance problems.

When the letter was submitted to the board Dec. 18 by CVPA president Marilyn Berry, Stables said he didn't know anything about the problems.

Later a spokesman for the school district said Stables was aware of maintenance deterioration this year.

Yorke wants an explanation of the channels used to report problems to the administration.

The parents groups inferred principals couldn't get action when they reported maintenance problems, he said today.

"If a parent group has to come forward with a list of complaints then something's wrong somewhere."

Extensive media coverage of the issue was sought by the parents group and has damaged administration and the district.

Stables told the board he hadn't planned to explain the charges.

"I wasn't presenting a case of defence, but rather of investigation," Stables told Yorke.

Stables said he was investigating specific allegations.

The list included termites at McKenzie, a leaking roof at Willows and severe deterioration to grounds and buildings at Colquitz elementary.

The parent group claims maintenance levels have been deteriorating for some time, and are the result of staff cutbacks this year and lack of communication with administration.

The board decided to invite Berry to a meeting to discuss Stables' investigation of the problems.

No date was set for the meeting.

A 38-year-old Saanich woman was charged in provincial court Monday afternoon with attempted murder and wounding with intent after a Sunday night stabbing on Hartland Road.

Mary Ann Amadio, 30 Hartland, was remanded until today when judicial interim release and her election of trial will be considered.

In asking for the remand, Crown prosecutor Robert Mulligan said he is concerned about the mental state of the accused and wants a doctor to examine her.

Saanich police said the victim, Margaret Grace Mckay, 58, of 121 Hartland, is in good condition in hospital.

Walsh Named

Walsh, who represents North Saanich, succeeds Rubymay Parrott who decided not to run this year because of duties as vice-president of the B.C. School Trustees Association and director of the Canadian School Trustees Association.

Quick Math Buries 'Bribery' Bid

A suggestion by Greater Victoria school trustee Mark Fisher that homeowners who vote in municipal and school board elections be awarded a bonus of $25 was rejected as bribery by the board Monday night.

Trustee Susan Brice, who said the attempt to fight voter apathy had a certain flair, asked Fisher to think up some other measure.

"Would you buy $12.95?" Fisher asked.

The proposal was shot down by several trustees. John Young called it undemocratic, Mary Breer said it was a violation of human rights, Winfield Mott said it was too expensive and Martin Levin said it was bribery.

The most convincing argument, however, came from Mott who said it would cost between $200,000 and $1 million, depending on how many homeowners voted.

End of discussion.

Jean drove into town to (a) pick up a registered letter, (b) drop off a painting to the Little Gallery, which exhibits her works.

She got the registered letter and found out she has to return $750 from a federal grant (the cash is long spent).

Jean went back to the carpark to take her picture, which would sell for between $200 and $300, to the gallery.

No picture. Pinched.

Jolly Jack's a Million-Dollar Catch

The most eligible bachelor here these days has to be Jack Livsey, a 29-year-old self-employed carpenter who lives with his parents in Sidney.

Jack, according to one admirer, looks a little like Tom Jones.

But there are precisely one million other reasons Jack's become a prize catch — the $1 million dollar Provincial draw he won New Year's Eve.

He hasn't figured out yet what he will do with the money. For the moment, he says, he'll probably take a little holiday, somewhere south, and just sit back and think about it for a while.

The late Bill Scott had a wry sense of humor.

Laughter should flow, he told them, and to help make sure it did, he was earmarking $5,000 in his will for liquid sustenance for the mourners.

Well Bill's gone and so are the hopes for an alcoholic farewell.

Seems he crossed everybody up — there's no $5,000 in the will — at least not for drinking and that's enough to make anyone cry.

Royal Roads Military College will be the scene this week of some shooting for a $7-million movie called The Changeling.

Film crews will be at the college Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The college will be used as the estate for Douglas who plays the part of a big-time senator.

A Town Talk regular asks if other hockey fans are as irritated as he is by play-by-play announcer Bill Hewitt's constant use of Toronto Maple Leaf forward Lanny McDonald's full name.

It may not be quite that bad but you get the idea.

TOWN TALK

Is this just some Hewitt idiosyncrasy or has McDonald got some special clause in his contract?

Our hockey friend suggests Hewitt should play back the tape of a broadcast and hear for himself how ridiculous it sounds.

Come Jan. 15, residents of the Western Community who travel to town by bus will be able to obtain transfers to urban bus routes.

Among other improvements, fare concessions will be available for children, students and senior citizens.

On the face of it such operational changes appear modest enough, relatively quick and easy to accomplish.

But obviously there is a complexity and degree of difficulty involved which simply cannot be grasped by someone who is not an expert on transit matters.

There must be, because these particular changes haven't been implemented overnight.

That was June 1, 1975. Yes, three and a half years ago.

Tips to Help Cope with the Cold

By LAWRENCE MEYER
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Feel free, if you like, to look on this cold weather as a nuisance, or worse. You could not get your car door open. The motor would not start. A pipe froze in your house. Your heating bill is way up.

But there are a few things you can do to make winter less of a hassle and less expensive.

Starting with the car. Before trying to start the engine, turn the headlights on for no more than 30 seconds. Turn them off. Make sure all other accessories (radio, heater, etc.) are off. Turning the headlight on briefly draws current from the battery, but also warms it, making the battery more efficient.

Push the gas pedal down to the floor, all the way down, once or twice to prime the carburetor and set the automatic choke. Take your foot off the gas pedal and leave it off. Turn the ignition on and the car should start.

Battery — Make sure the water in the battery does not get too low. Check the water level whenever you get gas. Twice a year, battery cables should be removed from the battery posts and all corrosion should be cleaned from both posts and cables. Baking soda can be used to clean them and cold water to rinse them. Cleaning the cables and posts will help the battery to operate at its most efficient level. Put grease or petroleum jelly over the posts after reconnecting the cables to prevent corrosion build-up.

Fan Belt — Check to see if its cracked or frayed and replace it if it is. A worn fan belt can mean an undercharged battery or no fan belt at all at an inconvenient moment. If the fan belt goes, the car won't run long without it.

Radiator — Check the hoses on the cooling system. If they're cracked or soft to the touch replace them before they break. The radiator should be flushed once a year to get dirt and rust out of the cooling system. Antifreeze should be checked to make sure there's enough to prevent freezing of the cooling system. Permanent antifreze, despite the name, doesn't last forever. After a year or so it may lose its properties and should be changed.

Engine — If your car is running ragged, it is probably a good idea to get a tune-up. Cold weather starting is hard enough for a car that is running well. The spark plugs, points, condenser and perhaps even the ignition wires should be changed, carburetion and timing checked.

Oil should be changed at least every 10,000 miles but ideally every 3,000. Once the car has started, let the engine idle for two or three minutes before moving to warm the oil in the crankcase and properly lubricate engine parts. Use a multigrade oil in cold weather — 10W40 to 5W40. But don't idle the engine too long since excessive idling can overheat the engine and increase wear. Tap the accelerator a minute or so after starting. If the engine idles more slowly, it's ready to go. If not, give it another minute or so.

Windshield wipers — In wet, freezing weather or in snow, make sure the windshield wipers are not frozen to the windshield before turning them on. If they're stuck, turning them on can damage or destroy the mechanism that operates them.

A word or two about the house:

Lighting the fireplace may give a cozy feeling, but it can mean as much as a 20 percent heat loss. Most of the hot air goes up the chimney and it eventually gets replaced by cold air from outside. If you have to have a fire, think about installing glass doors on the fireplace. And when the fire is out, make sure the damper is closed.

Water pipes next to uninsulated exterior walls may freeze. Some persons recommend letting a faucet run very slowly so that water will not stand in te pipes. But beware. If the drain is next to an extrior wall, it may freeze instead and then back up.

TAKE OFF THAT TOO-TIGHT RING!

Removing a ring sometimes can be a problem — especially when changes in temperature or humidity have caused the finger it's on to swell. A string or thread, though, often can do the job when the usual soap treatment fails.

Run one end of a length of thread or light string under the hand ornament and wind the other end in tight, closely spaced coils down the finger and over the knuckle. Then it's usually a simple matter to slip the offending bauble off over the wrapping. If that doesn't work, grasp the loose end of the thread (the one pointing toward your palm) securely in your other hand, pull the "tail" up against the back of the ring, and while exerting continued "forward" pressure on the wrapping, start to uncoil it from around the finger. As the thread unwinds, it should gently push the ring ahead of it — right off over the knuckle!

Cirrhosis Spotted Early

your health
By L. L. Coleman, MD

By L. L. COLEMAN, M.D.

I fell into the habit of drinking a lot of alcohol when I was a senior at college. Now, at age 24, I have been warned that if I didn't stop, I would develop cirrhosis of the liver. My father died of that. I think I'm finally getting some sense in my head, and have decided to stop drinking for good. However, I'd like to know if there's any way to determine if I already have the beginnings of cirrhosis. — Mr. R.S.K.

Dear Mr. K.:

I want to be helpful to you. First, however, I must take this opportunity to say that I hope your letter will awaken other young people to the dangers of over-indulging in alcohol.

Alcohol is a drug, a dangerous drug. It also is addictive, especially to those whose threshold of resistance is low. Health officials all over North America point out that alcohol is an insidious drug. Their statistics definitely show that the mass epidemic of teen-age drinking and young adult drinking is open of the great threats to the health of our youth.

If such experiences as yours could be transmitted to these young people, perhaps it would help them break the cycle of uncontrolled drinking and induce in them a sense of reality about the hazards of alcohol.

To return to your own problem, there are indeed many sensitive tests to determine liver damage and cirrhosis of the liver, even when the problem is in its early phases.

Many new and highly complicated chemical studies of the blood, known as SGOT, SGPT and CG, can pick up the very earliest evidences of cirrhosis of the liver. When alcohol is stopped, the blood levels of these complex chemicals tend to return to normal. With the absence of alcohol and with regular medical supervision, you need not ever be a candidate for the sad fate that had befallen your father. I congratulate you on your wisdom in dealing maturely with your problem.

We wait with bated breath for new information about the experimental surgery for deafness you once wrote about. You can understand our anxiety when you know that we have a 7-year-old child with nerve deafness. How is this research progressing?

Dear Mrs. A.:

The use of electronic implants in the ear is being energetically studied at various hospitals and universities around the country.

I have already written about the early scientific endeavours of Dr. William House in Los Angeles. His brilliant pioneering advances may yet lead to some of the answers to nerve deafness.

Now, at the University of Michigan Medical School, valuable information is being obtained by the further researches of Dr. Lars G. Johnsson and his colleagues. With such dedicated researchers at work, it is probably only a matter of time before many people burdened by a world of silence will be liberated from their isolation.

Youth Clinic

Young readers' questions on human relations and sex are answered by a panel of experts: Marion Powell, medical doctor; Graham Cotter, clergyman; and Bruce Vichert, social worker. Send questions to Youth Clinic, The Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N4.

Dear Dr. Powell: I am a 15-year-old girl, soon to be 16. I have been wondering whether I should take the Pill or not, because I have a boyfriend with whom I would like to have sex.

I recently read an article about all the health hazards to those who smoke and take the Pill. I don't smoke but I occasionally use marijuana. Would I endanger my health going on the Pill, or stunt the growth of my body?

Answer: A great deal has been written about the safety of the Pill. It is true that for women over the age of 30 who are heavy smokers there is an increased risk of heart attacks and stroke. It is a relatively small risk compared to the benefits of the Pill.

The Pill offers the greatest protection against pregnancy of the available methods of birth control. The Pill is not likely to stunt your growth because you are probably almost fully grown now, but it does affect the breasts which do increase in size.

You and your boyfriend should discuss all the methods of birth conrtol with a counsellor who can answer all your questions and concerns. But making a decision to have sex involves a lot more than choosing a method of birth control. It is a good thing to know what you are doing.

* * *

Dear Mr. Vichert: I can't believe it when I see so many kids smoking — even friends I've had since elementary school. In the halls every period you hear, "Got a match?" or "Got a light?"

I have become very depressed at why this has all happened. In my whole life, I have maybe had three cigarettes, I don't smoke and I never will. If they think they are going to become cool, they won't because they are not the type. Could you please explain why they do this?

Answer: It can be surprising when friends you have had since elementary school do things that are different from you own set of values. Somehow we believe that people will always be "good," especially the people we have grown up with.

In spite of their smoking, though, they are probably still very nice people. Smoking doesn't make a person good or bad, it just makes a person healthy of unhealthy. I am glad that you are voting in favor of health.

Some young people feel that smoking will indicate that they have grown up or somehow acquired the qualities that the ads make you believe you will have if you start to smoke.

BCYP Makes Year-Long Plans

elizabeth forbes

Before leaving for his home in West Vancouver at conclusion of the 49th session of the B.C. Youth Parliament (BCYP), Premier John Moonen took time to tell me something of the parliament's plans and projects for 1979.

"Ours is not just a five-day debating society that meets once a year in the Legislative Chamber at the Parliament Buildings," he reminded me.

"We are a year-round service organization with projects aimed at helping the youth of British Columbia."

He spoke briefly of several new projects accepted during the recent session.

"We will be organizing a monthly program of activities for boys and girls in the Blanshard Street community Centre in Victoria," he said.

Members of the BCYP living in this area and in other places on Vancouver Island will supervise these monthly get-togethers, arrange indoor games and activities and, as the weather improves, several field trips for the young people.

Two projects have also been approved in which members will work with the Boys' Club here.

These are the staging of a mini-Olympics on the Victoria Day weekend in May and a series of tours of the Parliament Buildings complex with BCYP members acting as guides.

Here again, up-island members will be involved with those in Victoria to help with the projects, Moonen said.

He also spoke enthusiastically of three Prince George members at the session who urged the need of a community youth service program there.

"This led us to initiate a program in which members in that northern city and those from surrounding areas will follow the lead of those on the lower mainland and organize regular monthly visits to the Prince George Hospital with a program aimed at amusing and helping young patients there."

A crafts and games project for the youth of Kamloops will be repeated this year on April 14.

It will be held in the Kamloops Boys' and Girls' Club and while it is sponsored and will be organized by members in the interior of British Columbia, all BCYP members have been invited to attend and participate in this event.

In Vancouver, after four years' sponsorship of a junior lacrosse team, Moonen said "we plan to switch to support of a junior soccer team."

In this move he expects to involve more members, especially in driving the players and in attending the games.

The sponsorship includes a monetary grant, presentation of T-shirts to the young soccer players and a party for them at the end of the season.

Lower mainland members will also continue the program started last year of visiting young people, once a month, in the Vancouver General Hospital.

The most ambitious ongoing project of the year, as Moonen sees it, is the sponsorship, organizing and manning of a camp for under privileged children at Shawnigan Lake during the latter part of August.

"This important project offers all Parliamentarians the chance to participate in youth work," he believes.

He praised the quality of private members' resolutions presented, debated, and passed or defeated during the session.

These include resolutions on abortion, trade unions, education, freedom of information, annual income, marijuana and advertising for alcholic beverages, tobacco, and lotteries which were described as "nothing more or less than gambling."

He also spoke of a movement across Canada to form a National Youth Parliament.

"It is coming — and very soon," he predicted.

In conclusion Premier Moonen made it very clear that the 85 Parliamentarians, between the ages of 16 and 21, who attended the recent session were there to represent all the youth of B.C. and to fulfil the aims and objectives of the BCYP motto — Youth Serving Youth.

They were nominated for the Parliament by high schools, universities and community or church youth groups.

Although they divide into government and opposition sides during the session, they represent no political party either on the side of the House they sit or in debate.

"It's a learning experience," Moonen explained, "in which members gain knowledge of parliamentary procedure, to express their views clearly and concisely and — what is perhaps more important — to understand the value of community service."

Later, he believes, when these young men and women have reached the age of 21 and no longer can be a member of the BCYP, they will be well equipped to join a party of their choice and to enter public service at political or community levels.

Moonen, now 21 and a commerce student at University of British Columbia, is in his final year with the BCYP.

He hopes when his term as Premier is over, later this year, to continue to work for the Parliament as a member of the BCYP Senate.

Postscript — Recent sitting of the BCYP was of particular interest to the young Parliamentarians.

It marked the 50th anniversary of the founding of the movement in B.C. as the Older Boy's Parliament.

To commemorate this anniversary, the BCYP senate and the alumni presented the Parliament with a gavel and a stand that shows around its base, small silver plaques.

On those plaques are the names of every Speaker and the dates they held office, from Arthur Howarth of New Westminster, who was the first Speaker, up to and including Cryil Chalk of Kelowna who held the position during the recent session.

Premier John Moonen

Viewers Take Breaks

TORONTO (CP) — A recent study of television viewing habits shows that viewers who are familiar with a program's format are able to avoid commercials by anticipating commerical breaks and leaving the room or turning the channel.

The study, conducted by Media Research Plus of Toronto for the Canadian Media Directors Council, said that because of this, shows watched by millions on a regular basis may not be the best advertising vehicles.

It also showed that viewers pay less attention to commercials as a program progresses and that when three or four commercials are clustered together, less attention is paid to those in the later positions.

It also said that advertisers should buy a program exclusively or participate in specials so that viewers do not become too familiar with commercial scheduling.

The study said the long-term remedy to the problem is a reduction in the amount of commercials broadcast.

"It is very much in the broadcasting industry's own interests to take some action in this respect before they are legislated into it or advertisers start pulling out of television."

DEAR ABBY: After 22 years of marriage, I find I might as well be living alone. I'm 46 and my wife is 45.

We raised two fine children who are grown and gone, and now we have very little to talk about. My biggest problem is the way my wife shuts me out. She loves to read, and for the past three or four years she has been taking a book to bed with her every night. This is all the company she seems to want or need.

I realize that no marriage can maintain the level of passion that produces rockets and Roman candles indefinitely, but I feel cheated.

Any advice? Sign me . . . — LONESOME

DEAR LONESOME: Since your wife loves to read, do her (and yourself) a favor and get "The Ann Landers Encyclopedia." It contains a wealth of valuable information on a wide variety of common problems. But the piece titled "What Marriage is All About," by Dr. Eugene Kennedy, is well worth the price of the book, and should be required reading for both you and your wife. Trust me.

DEAR ABBY: I have a question which I am sure has bothered many men in my stage of life.

I am 70, healthy, and still sexually virile. Having been married to the same woman for 36 years, sex has become somewhat of a humdrum affair. Yes, I know what the sex manuals say: "Bring variety into your sex life — try different positions, localities, etc. . . .", but the fact remains, the best aphrodisiac is (and I hate to admit it) — a new woman, willing and eager.

From time to time, such a woman enters my life, and even though I know I am being unfaithful and have some mild pangs of conscience, I find it difficult to resist an occasional extramarital affair.

To be perfectly candid, if my wife had an outside romance occasionally, as long as the man was discreet and clean and, of course, if I knew nothing about it — as I'm sure my wife knows nothing about my occasional flings — it wouldn't bother me too much.

What do you think, Abby? — VIRILE AT 70

DEAR VIRILE: I think you have very neatly rationalized your occasional infidelity, and you're looking to me for a nod of approval. But the best I can do is "understand." Everyone is accountable to his own conscience.

DEAR ABBY: When my husband courted me I was secretly flattered because he was terribly jealous. I thought it was proof of his love. Now that we've been married for a year, I'd give anything if he weren't so jealous.

He is jealous of every man I mention, look at, or even pass on the street. He accuses me of winking at them and giving them encouragement. He's even accused me of meeting men on my lunch hour, and says he "knows" I've been with a lover if I get home 15 minutes late.

No one is safe from his filthy accusations. (Even the boy who delivers the newspaper!) He keeps after me to "confess" things and there is nothing to confess! I will gladly go to the police station and take a lie detector test — anything to prove my innocence once and for all. Help me.! — INNOCENT.

DEAR INNOCENT: Your husband is the one who needs the help. Constant accusations without basis are symptomatic of a sick mind. Get the man to a doctor!

CONFIDENTIAL TO "NEEDS HELP": Maybe he's saving your raincoat for a rainy day. Ask him to please return it on account of that's why YOU bought it. If that fails, make a trip to his apartment and pick it up.

The eight-pagefolder Pleurisy states that pleurisy can have various causes and can develop in different ways. 'Primary' pleurisy is an inflammation which starts in the pleural tissues themselves from a germ, an injury or a growth. 'Secondary' pleurisy is a complication of some other chest disease such as pneumonia. In this case, the germ not only attacks the pleura, but also the lungs.

The folder explains how pleusiry develops and discusses its effects. Pleurisy is painful, Each movement of the chest wall may hurt. With each breath, cough or sneeze, the patient may experience sever pain.

The doctor treats pleurisy by attacking the infection that may have caused it. To limit the pain, he may restrict the movement of the lungs and also prescribe medication.

Wedding Bells Ring, Along With Curses . . .

By Allan Reditt
Reuter

LISBON — It was the sort of wedding where the priest didn't need to ask if anyone objected — it was clear that just about everyone did.

So, while many ceremonies end with the tossing of rice at the newlyweds, when Joaquim Alves Magalhaes was married people hurled abuse, instead.

Consensus around the village seemed to be that he should marry another Maria — Maria Jose Chicara Barreto, who had given him two children, with another on the way.

Furthermore, some persons even favored a third Maria — Maria Emilia Teixeira Alves.

Magalhaes had already married her once, but the vows had been annulled on grounds of non-consummation.

The 33-year-old groom had clearly underestimated public sentiment and he and his new Maria faced a hostile, caterwauling congregation as they arrived for their vows.

Included in the crowd was Maria Jose, the mother of the groom's chilren, but the priest insisted there was nothing he could do.

He argued that Magalhaes was legally a bachelor having never entered into a marriage contract with Maria Jose, despite the fact that they had lived together for many years.

As Joaquim and Maria Antonia were proclaimed man and wife, the congregation erupted in fury and chreatened the priest and the couple. The sexton managed to get them into the sacristy and away from the mob, and telephoned the police.

Two lines of burly, armed policemen formed a "guard of honor" at the church porch and the the less-than-happy couple made an undignified dash for the back of the jeep.

The jilted Maria Jose, meanwhile, failing in her bid to keep her man, collapsed and was carried by supporters to the nearest drugstore to be revived.

Friends Bungle Jail Van Rescue

RIO DE JANEIRO — An attempt to free three U.S. women being held on drug charges failed Monday when the would-be rescuers escaped with the wrong prisoners, authorities reported.

Armed men in two cars ambushed a police van in front of a second van that was carrying the three women. The men shot and wounded the driver and a guard of the first van and drove off in the vehicle.

But the van they seized contained six common criminals, some of whom were en route to a hospital for treatment.

"They must have got the wrong van," said Police Chief Pereira Duarte. "I don't see what anyone would want with common prisoners and sick people."

The van carrying the three women continued on to a court where the women were to appear on the drugs charges. One of the six freed prisoners was later recaptured.

THE TRUE STORY OF PRESLEY?

NEW YORK - It was only a matter of time before someone decided to mine the life of Elvis Presley for marquee gold, and a group of New York businessmen are the first in the diggings. Co-producer Saul Swimmer says the group will bankroll a $10 million film biography to be titled The King of Rock and Roll — with longtime Elvis friend and confidant George Klein writing the script. Says Klein, "I'm going to tell the true story ... I'm not interested in the money. I want to see it's done right." And who will star as the mightiest rocker of them all? Swimmer says it could be John Travolta or Warren Beatty — or "anybody on the street."

NEW ORLEANS - San Francisco costume designer Alexis Seepo has a trendy word of advice for women contemplating an evening on the town — forget the make-up and wear a mask. She says Tutmania resulting from museum displays of the Egyptian boy king's blue and gold death mask has set the next fashion trend.

NEW YORK - Vladimir Horowitz is off the concert trail for at least four months. The pianist, in hospital here for almost three weeks in December, is home, but a complication — a kidney ailment — will force him into a lengthy recuperation.

LOS ANGELES - A couple of hit records may be breeding movies. Reports in Hollywood say Barbra Streisand and Neil Diamond are talking to writers about a film based on their song You Don't Bring Me Flowers. And a television network supposedly is looking into the possibility of filming Kenny Rogers' The Gambler— a tale of hardluck philosophizing.

PEKIN, Ill. — A woman who says her wig caught fire when a waiter at the next table flambeed a dish of food has filed suit against Holiday Inns Inc., saying the incident ruined her business trip.

Nancy Chamberlain, 31, filed suit in Tazewell County district court, saying her business trip in January 1977 to Des Moines, Iowa, went badly because she "smelled like burnt hair."

She also contends in the suit that she was burned and scarred in the incident at a Holiday Inn restaurant in Des Moines and asks for a judgment in excess of $5,000.

Electric Chair Bid for Gacy

CHICAGO — The electric chair will be sought for John Wayne Gacy, indicted on charges of murdering seven young men and boys whose bodies were buried at his suburban Chicago home or thrown into a nearby river, authorities say.

Bernard Carey, Cook County states attorney, said Monday he will ask for Gacy's execution, stating there is "more than one reason" why prosecutors will ask for the death penalty, he refused to elaborate.

Investigators have found the bodies of 26 young men and boys beneath Gacy's home in Des Plaines, a northwest Chicago suburb. The remains of another body were found beneath his garage.

Gacy is reported to have confessed to the killings — the largest mass murder in the United States in this century — telling police he had sex with 32 boys and young men, then killed them.

Carey also said he believes 12 unbiased jurors can be found in Cook County, where Gacy's home is located, and that he will oppose any attempt to move a trial.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1♠	2♡	Pass	4♡

The bidding sometimes guides declarer to the best method of play. In this deal, for example, South has a far better chance to make the contract once East opens the bidding than if East-West had remained silent throughout the auction. East's spade bid draws an accurate blueprint that declarer can easily follow to reach his goal.

West led the jack of spades and East cashed two spade tricks before shifting to a club. South's problem now was to avoid two diamond losers. He could not expect to do this against most possible divisions of the East-West cards, but South solved his problem by relying heavily on the vital clues furnished by East's spade bid.

Declarer deduced that East virtually had to have the K-Q of diamonds for his opening bid. South could see 12 points in dummy and 15 in his own hand — leaving only 13 points for East's opening bid. Even that number had been reduced to twelve by West's jack of spades lead, and the K-Q of diamonds were consequently sure to be part of East's values.

South's best chance, by far, was to attempt an endplay against East. Accordingly, he won the club return with the queen, ruffed a spade in dummy, cashed the A-K of trumps and ace of clubs and led a low diamond towards dummy.

When West played low, South played dummy's nine, which lost to the king. East was now in bad shape, whether he returned a spade, a diamond or a club. Any one of these plays was bound to hand declarer the rest of the tricks.

It is true that if East had held the K-Q-10 of diamonds the projected endplay would not have succeeded, but in that case every other conceivable method of play would also have failed.

MAKE INFLATION YOUR SERVANT
This is what happens when you have a long term lease. Not only is your own rent fixed at a surprisingly low level, but as the rental market inflates, the value of your lease increases. Prestige location on Fairfield side of Beacon Hill Park. One BR, sauna baths, whirlpool, workshop, rooftop lounge, covered parking. You pay $29,500 for 95-year lease, which works out at $26.00 per mo. (plus actual cost of upkeep). When you no longer need the apartment, then sell the remaining term of the lease for the then market value. If you are tired of being hit in the pocket book by continually higher rents, then investigate this. You'll be glad you did. Don Bacon, Byron Price & Assoc. Ltd. 595-6588 or 385-2458.

Fence Fell Down? Start Project Now

GARDENING
jack beastall

How would it be to start a replacement project now?

I'm not suggesting you try digging post holes in frozen ground, or try to set the fence in place while cold winds chill you to the bone.

If you want a fence that will last well and look good there is a fair amount of work to be done before it is ready to erect, and it can be done partly in the basement and partly under shelter outside.

Whether you settle for a pre-cut fence, or have the machinery to cut the fence from rough lumber, is for you to decide. The important thing now is obtain the material while fences are not in great demand.

Watch the lumber yard advertisements, or call a few yards and see what they have to offer. You may not get any great bargain, but you could save the price of a good fence paint on the deal.

We will assume you settle for the pre-cut fence. When the lumber arrives, stack it in a warm basement, well spaced with cross bars between each layer, and allow it to slowly dry without warping. When dry it is ready for its first coat of paint.

Primarily we paint to preserve; decoration is secondary. The color will be your personal choice. To me the rose covered cottage with a white picket fence belongs far into the past.

Too much white paint in a garden clashes with the color of plants and detracts from their beauty. Also, white soon looks a mess in an atmosphere loaded with oil soot and industrial grime.

Cheap paint takes as long to apply as the best paint, sometimes longer because more coats are needed to cover well. Invest in the top grade and you will be happy to look at the fence 10 years from now.

Painting of the pieces should be done outside in a shed or garage. Too many disastrous fires have resulted from an accumulation of paint fumes being drawn into an oil furnace. Take no chances. By the time the lumber is dry there will be sunny weekends for the job.

Apply the first coat carefully, working it well into cracks and rough grain, and daubing end grain surfaces well. The first coat is most important because the second coat will never get into spots that have been missed.

When the fence is erected before painting the lapped surfaces are not protected from the weather. Moisture collects and remains in these areas and rot sets in rapidly, and a costly fence falls apart in a few years.

Allow plenty of time for the first coat to dry thoroughly. Two weeks is the minimum. There is no hurry, and you are aiming at a good job.

Apply the second coat to all surfaces. When this is thoroughly dry, paint the underground portions of the posts with a wood preservative.

I find the best preservative to be liquified roofing cement. The expensive wood preservatives are useless unless applied when the lumber contains not more than a certain percentage of moisture. The manufacturer told me this when my coldframes collapsed from dry rot two years after painting. No gardener has the equipment to determine the percentage of moisture in lumber.

If any of the painted pieces have to be cut during erection of the fence, the cut surfaces can be well daubed with paint before nailing.

When the fence is in place you will be proud of the job, and it will still look good many years from now.

CHILLING ROAR of the stone lion carved on a building at the University of Kansas in Lawrence, Kansas, is caused by ice from the current cold snap.

HORNER TO PROBE

OTTAWA (CP) — Industry Minister Jack Horner has ordered an investigation into a problem which has festered since a Crown corporation decided in 1975 to sell most of the patent rights for a Victoria man's invention to Hawker-Siddeley Canada Ltd., a British-owned multi-national corporation.

The device, called a separator, was invented in 1965 by Ted Tilby, and can transform sugar cane into automobile fuel and wood panelling.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A Port Alberni logger was told Monday to stick to the woods the next time he feels like shouting and using obscenities.

Judge Harold Alder made the suggestion in provincial court before levying a $75 fine against Nirmal Naras, 19, after he pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance by shouting.

The court was told Naras had become abusive to a sales clerk in a department store Dec. 18 after she refused to accept for a refund merchandise for which his companion had no sales tag or receipt.

Two 20-year-olds were told by Judge Alder that if they were going to have "fun" they would have to be prepared to pay for it.

Bradley Leason and David MacDonald, both of 419-252 Gorge Road East, were fined $50 each and given suspended sentences with three months probation after pleading guilty to charges of public mischief and causing a disturbance by being drunk.

The court was told they were seen kicking down a motel sign and carrying it off.

A third man, Stephen Trim, 21, of no fixed address, charged with the same offences, pleaded not guilty and was remanded until Jan. 15 to set a date for trial.

Pleading guilty to drinking-driving charges were: Malinda Morino, 30, of 8545 East Saanich Rd., $300; Christopher Doyle, 22, of 595 Broadway, $450 with six months probation to include taking the impaired drivers' course; Gilbert Joe, 40, of 880 Lampson, $200 plus six months probation to include the impaired drivers course.

Fishing Talks on Again

OTTAWA (CP) — Special negotiators meet here Wednesday for the first time since the Canadian and United States governments told them to resume efforts to settle disputed maritime boundaries.

It was widely expected that External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson and U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance would have taken charge of the boundary talks after the negotiators reported at the end of 1978.

Instead Jamieson and Vance agreed last week the negotiators should make "fresh efforts to bridge the few but difficult and sensitive remaining differences."

Until there is a boundary settlement which would include a long-term fisheries agreement, Canadian and American fishermen won't be allowed to fish in each other's waters as they have for decades.

Reciprocal fishing was halted last summer when Canada ordered American fishermen out of its zone because of the plodding pace of the boundary talks. The U.S. retaliated by telling Canadian fishermen to go home.

First on the agenda Wednesday for Lloyd Cutler of the U.S. and Marcel Cadieux of Canada is the Atlantic Coast, and attempts to resolve differences over the management and allocation of scallop, haddock and herring stocks in parts of that area claimed by both countries.

Resolution of that issue would be a major step in a boundary agreement because the fishing interests of both countries would be protected. The American boundary claim would give it all of the rich Georges Bank fishing ground while Canada wants almost half of the bank.

Boundary negotiations began in September, 1977, several months after both countries proclaimed 200-nautical-mile fishing zones which overlapped in four spots.

Besides Georges Bank, there are disputed boundaries off the Strait of Juan de Fuca between Washington State and British Columbia, off Dixon Entrance between B.C. and the Alaskan Panhandle and in the Beaufort Sea between Alaska and the Yukon.

The negotiators worked out a West Coast boundary settlement earlier this year but were unable to sell their package deal to fishermen and local politicians.

Since September there hasn't been any substantive discussions on West Coast matters. There won't be any more until the negotiators can resolve East Coast matters, Jamieson and Vance have ordered.

$250,000 SUIT

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A suit for more than $250,000 has been filed in Multnomah County Circuit Court against United Airlines in connection with the crash of a DC-8 Dec. 28.

The plaintiff, Timothy J. Harrington, was on the jetliner that crashed just east of here. The suit is believed to be the first in connection with the crash, which killed 10 of the 189 occupants of the plane and injured 69. The plane was bound for here from Denver.

The suit claims Harrington has had severe headaches and emotional trauma since the crash. It claims the airline was negligent in failing to have enough fuel aboard and in failing to properly maintain the landing gear.

Court-Martial For Pilot Set

FORT LEWIS, Wash. (AP) — The court-martial of an Army private first class accused of intentionally crashing an Army-owned light plane in British Columbia has been set for Jan. 29.

Jay C. Turner, 18, has been charged with larceny, destruction of government property and desertion.

Army officials say Turner rented a single-engine plane from the Fort Lewis Flying Club Nov. 4, saying he intended to fly to Missoula, Mont. He never arrived.

After a futile search for the pilot, Canadian authorities surmised he had shut off the plane's ignition and bailed out before the aircraft crashed. The passenger-side door had been removed and the passenger seat was strapped in the plane's back seat.

CLARK FORGING JAPAN LINKS?

TOKYO (CP) — Opposition Leader Joe Clark said today that he has been given what may be the first indication that Japan is ready to build new job-generating manufacturing plants in Canada.

In return, he said a Progressive Conservative government would be willing to give Japan priority rights to buy oil and other energy resources considered surplus in Canada.

After hearing Esaki talk enthusiastically of "virtually boundless" Canada-Japan trade opportunities, Clark said he suggested that "it would be quite useful to us to have more assembly and processing of Japanese manufacturing industries set in Canada."

B.C. Jobless Tops 9%

OTTAWA (CP) — The British Columbia unemployment rate jumped to 9.1 per cent in December from 8.5 per cent in November, Statistics Canada reported today.

The B.C. increase was counter to the national trend which showed a drop of two tenths of one per cent in the same period to a seasonally-adjusted 8.1 per cent.

The number unemployed throughout the nation, on a seasonally-adjusted basis, dropped to 908,000 in December, down 11,000 from November.

Newfoundland, which consistently registers the highest unemployment rate in the country, showed an increase of nine-tenths of one per cent to 17.4 per cent.

The jobless rate was lowest in Alberta where it dropped to 4.1 from 4.5 per cent.

The federal agency also reported that the actual number of people working in December was 10,140,000, up from 9,729,000 in December, 1977.

The seasonally-adjusted unemployment rate for men aged 15-24 dropped four-tenths of one per cent to 14.5 per cent in December while the rate for women aged 15-24 increased by two-tenths of a per cent to 14.3 per cent.

For men aged 25 and over, the rate declined by two-tenths of one per cent to 4.9 per cent. For women aged 25 and over, the rate dropped to 7.4 per cent in December from 7.5 per cent in November.

The unemployment rate in Prince Edward Island increased to a seasonally-adjusted 11.2 per cent in December from 11.1 in November. Quebec, which has the second largest work force after Ontario, showed an increase to 10.5 per cent from 10.4 per cent.

The rate in Saskatchewan rose to 4.8 per cent from 4.6 a month earlier.

Other provinces showed slight declines. The rate remained unchanged in Nova Scotia at 10.5 per cent.

In New Brunswick, the December rate declined to 11.6 per cent from 11.9 per cent in November. The unemployment rate in Ontario dropped to 6.9 per cent from 7.3 per cent a month earlier. Manitoba showed a drop to 5.8 per cent from 6.4 per cent.

Statistics Canada said the total labor force in December was 11,011,000, up from 10,612,000 in December, 1977.

The actual number of unemployed in December was 870,000 compared with 850,000 in November and 882,000 in December, 1977.

This figure, known as the participation rate, was up from 62.8 per cent in November.

The unemployment rate on a seasonally-adjusted basis, which takes into account labor force trends, stood at 8.5 per cent in December, 1977.

Although the rate has slowly crept down to its current 8.1 per cent, few economists expect there will be a significant improvement in the unemployment rate this year.

Although the declining value of the dollar has improved the country's trade position significantly, producing a record trade surplus in 1978, the labor force has been growing almost as rapidly as the number of jobs created.

Slow growth in the United States this year, destination of about 70 per cent of Canada's exports, means slower growth in trade and the rate of growth in new jobs is expected to barely keep pace with growth in the labor force.

The slight improvement in the unemployment rate over the last year is the result of job creation outpacing growth in the labor force.

The labor force increased 399,000 in the last year while the number of jobs increased by 411,000.

Shah's Millions Shifting To Trust

Times News Services

TEHRAN — The shah today announced that all personal property of the royal family — estimated to be valued at hundreds of millions of dollars — would be turned over to a crown-sponsored foundation for religious, social and educational purposes, Radio Iran said.

The announcement came after 266 persons imprisoned by military tribunals for various offenses were pardoned by Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

The disposition of the royal property was revealed as demonstrators, demanding the overthrow of the shah and his tenuous new civilian government, marched in Tehran.

Falling snow held down the number of demonstrators and halted flights of evacuees fleeing the embattled country.

Meanwhile, the country awaited word on when the shah intends to go abroad on an extended vacation in reponse to pressure from the civilian government of Shahpour Bakhtiar.

In an attempt to bolster the new government, the United States has shifted its policy toward the shah and agreed that he should leave the country permanently, officials said today.

Radio Iran did not mention the amount of property involved in the turnover to the $1-billion Pahlavi Foundation, which was created 18 years ago with a personal grant of $133 million of the shah's wealth for use by charitable organizations, orphanages and higher education.

Palace sources said the latest property would include the shah's vast domestic holdings in company stocks, banks, factories and land.

Moreover, the opposition charged recently that members of the shah's family were among 178 top officials and political personalities who sent billions of dollars into private bank accounts abroad.

3 Killed In Motel Blaze

Prince George fire chief Harold Dornbierer said the blaze is believed to have been caused by a malfunctioning gas wall furnace in the Voyageur City Centre Motel unit occupied by the victims.

Police have not released the names of the victims.

Police said the victims are believed to have been sleeping when the blaze broke out.

The fire destroyed one unit, and damaged four others and caused about $100,000 damage Dornbierer said.

The fire was the 24th here in the first eight days of 1979 and the sixth major fire since Dec. 31.

Fire Tuesday caused about $2 million damage to a junior secondary school. A fire which destroyed an elementary school Dec. 31 caused more than $100,000 damage. Arson is suspected in the two school fires.

A blaze at a medical building Thursday destroyed the offices of three city doctors and the local Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society office. Two houses have also been destroyed by fire here in the New Year.

The deaths brought to six the number of accident fatalities here in less than 24 hours.

Trina Logan, 15, Ernest Langlois, 18, and Terry Renaud, 17, all of Prince George, died Sunday night when their car struck a parked transport truck on Highway 97, 28 kilometres south of here.

Meanwhile, in Kamloops, a library and two stores were destroyed early today when fire raced through a downtown shopping centre.

About 25 firemen battled the fire for two hours in -27 degree temperatures before bringing it under control.

Vander Zalm's View: Cartoon 'Malicious'

He was testifying at the opening of a libel case against Times Publishers, a division of FP Publications (Western) Ltd., then-publisher Stuart Underhill, editor Barbara McLintock and cartoonist Bob Bierman. Vander Zalm was minister of human resources at the time and now is minister of municipal affairs.

Vander Zalm told Mr. Justice F. Craig Munroe he did not regard it as a political cartoon.

"Here I see myself depicted as some monstrous person picking wings off flies. It's just terrible," he said.

He agreed that a political cartoon intends to convey a message or thought and because it was on the editorial page it was intended to be political in nature and that this cartoon contained a message or thought.

Asked what message or thought, he said: "I thought it was very malicious . . ."

He said the symbolism he saw in the cartoon was that the worst way to demonstrate a cruel person was to show him pulling wings off flies.

Asked if he thought the cartoon intended to say he was literally a person who did this, he replied: "It's certainly very illustrative. What else?"

But when shown pre-trial hearing testimony saying he didn't think it depicted him as literally a person picking wings off flies, but as a monster, he replied in court that what he meant was that people have not given the cartoon a literal interpretation and that he thought the flies were symbolic of defenceless people.

Asked if an interpretation could not be given that the minister was clipping the wings of people who abuse welfare, Vander Zalm said he did not take it that way. He said one of his major objections to the cartoon was that there was nothing it related to, "like a headline without a story."

MAGGIE'S TONSILS PULLED

OTTAWA (CP) — Margaret Trudeau, estranged wife of the prime minister, was reported in good condition in Ottawa General Hospital Tuesday after a tonsillectomy.

The 30-year-old Mrs. Trudeau was admitted Monday in preparation for the surgery, a hospital spokesman confirmed. She was expected to remain in hospital for a few days.

The prime minister remained in Vail, Colo., on a skiing holiday and is not expected to return to Ottawa until later in the week, his office said.

A friend in Montreal said Mrs. Trudeau had been complaining in recent weeks of influenza and, a sore throat. Doctors recommended that her tonsils be removed, the friend said.

Cambodia Rebels Claim Control Of Whole Land

Times News Services

Cambodia's new government today claimed total control of the nation. Vietnam became the first nation to recognize the regime and the Soviet Union hailed the victory.

Intelligence sources in Bankgkok said fighting was reported continuing but said Vietnam's tough army and its Cambodian supporters have overrun or isolated all significant resistance and assured total control of Cambodia.

They said heavy fighting was still underway in eastern parts of Cambodia near Vietnam but there was no indication former Khmer Rouge leaders were able to make good their threat to set up guerrilla bases to battle the Vietnamese "until final victory."

The Phnom Penh regime, meanwhile, reported today that thousands of people were flocking back to their native villages.

SPK, the official news agency of the provisional government which the Vietnamese army installed in Phnom Penh, said thousands of buffalo carts loaded with children and belongings were taking the villagers home from communal farms.

The report, broadcast from Phnom Penh, said a unit of the rebel movement's military forces was assigned to help the returnees.

Following the Communist victory over the U.S.-backed Lon Nol government in 1975, the government emptied the cities and villages and forced most of the population into the farms. Observers estimate that one million or more Cambodians were executed or died of hunger, exhaustion and disease on the farms.

"For the first time in many years, young men and women sang happily as they harvested," said the official report.

"Fires again warmed the kitchens in the houses on stilts along Highway 7, now restored to family life."

The fate of the Khmer Rouge government, which reportedly tried to flee Phnom Penh ahead of the offensive, was unknown.

An unconfirmed report said former prime minister and Communist Party boss Pol Pot had been killed under unknown circumstances.

In a related development, Cambodian Prince Norodom Sihanouk headed for New York from Tokyo today, saying he would seek U.S. diplomatic support for Cambodia's war with Vietnam but no financial or military aid.

The former Cambodian head of state expressed doubt there would be a UN Security Council session to discuss the Cambodian situation because of opposition from the Soviet Union and Czechoslovakia.

Tree-Farming Rubber Stamp

The tree farm licence of Rayonier Canada (B.C.) Ltd. covering the South Moresby Wilderness Proposal area on the southern Queen Charlotte Islands will be automatically renewed, Forests Minister Tom Waterland has announced.

The licence is slated to expire May 1.

For the last four years, as Rayonier geared up to log the Moresby area, environmental groups have been urging the government not to renew the cutting licence.

The Islands Protection Committee and numerous other organizations have proposed a wilderness area for the unique South Moresby wilderness and had been hoping the government would call a public hearing on the matter.

But in a recent interview, Waterland said he was opposed to public hearings on such controversial issues as the Moresby proposal because the debates were usually too emotional.

The minister also said he accepts that some locations in the Moresby area should be set aside from logging.

Waterland said economic and environmental factors will be considered in working out the final cutting plan for the South Moresby wilderness.

He said logging in the region will create an estimated 1,000 jobs.

"The economic benefits are therefore most evident and must be appreciated, and the wilderness recreation and other values must also be appreciated."

Juvenile Break-In Ring Smashed

Officers have recovered more than $6,000 worth of stolen property and arrested a 16-year-old Saanich boy.

Two other 16-year-olds, one from White Rock and the other from Saanich, have also been charged and two more are being questioned in connection with offences in Saanich and Victoria.

Among the items recovered were two outboard motors, car parts, signs, pop bottles, power tools and $800 worth of coffee that was stolen from a Dickson Coffee truck last month.

The boy's parents were unaware of their son's involvement and had not noticed the goods which apparently were moved into the house and hidden only a few days earlier.

Janzten said the thefts started about a year ago "almost as a lark," when one of the boys needed parts for a boat.

"From then on the whole thing mushroomed."

He said the boys discovered they needed power tools to work on the boat and that lead to a series of break-ins at construction sites.

Then they had to get parts for their cars and that resulted in thefts of batteries, parts and tools.

Recently the group had started breaking into grocery stores to get pop and food.

There were other thefts, Jantzen noted, which were harder to explain, such as the theft of flags from downtown Victoria, flashing lights off a Cablevision truck, an air horn off a parked transport and a complete hood off a taxi cab.

So far Oak Bay police have laid six counts of theft and possession of stolen property against the three charged so far. Other charges may be pending.

"It's going to take us a week to sort everything out," Jantzen said.

By AB KENT
Times Staff

A man once acknowledged as a world leader in electronic armaments is getting back into the science of weaponry after 20 years of boycott by fellow Americans.

Donald W. Jacobs, 63, of Oak Bay, has been living in a vocational wilderness since 1958 when he ran afoul of the U.S. military-industrial establishment by criticizing the system for corruption and treason.

There was no scandal and he never recanted, still believing nothing changed as a result of his published indictment, A Scientist and His Experiences with Corruption and Treason in the U.S. Military-Industrial Establishment (1969).

But the blot against his name melted away just a year ago and the rewards have begun to trickle in with a few small Canadian defence contracts for computerized systems.

Jacobs, who last month was named a fellow of the world-wide Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers, finds it curious that although nothing official had ever declared him persona non grata as an American defence contractor, the stigma followed him over the 49th parallel when he came to start anew in Canada.

He said in an interview at his Beach Drive home that in 1958 he tried to participate in Canadian defence work at a time when the Bomarc missile system was being deployed and Gen. George Pearkes was defence minister. Pearkes told him he could not be considered because he was not security-cleared by the U.S.

He was also unable to get Canadian federal government contracts of an unclassified, non-military nature.

In an effort to have the block lifted, Jacobs wrote to President Carter and shortly after, in February 1978, the secretary of the navy replied there was no obstacle to him being considered for future contracts.

In most of his time here Jacobs has done private commercial or industrial consulting and analysis in the computer field, including some for the provincial government.

He won't give details about his work for the Canadian navy. But his military expertise lies in weaponry and guidance systems.

During the Second World War Jacobs developed a reputation in artillery fire control, following up with design of a bombsight for the U.S. Navy which led to more navy work.

With the Cold War and Korean War and heavy U.S. involvement, Jacobs was asked to bid on bombsight production for the navy department, meaning large capital investment.

Jacobs' troubles began when he tried to negotiate financing through a dollar-a-year man from General Electric acting in a procurement role for the U.S. government. A loan was refused by this man, who Jacobs said was in conflict of interest with GE, which also wanted the bombsight contract.

When Jacobs tried to make a deal with other firms willing to finance the venture, they wanted their own terms and offered only low-paying roles for Jacobs instead of a profit-sharing arrangement.

Jacobs said he could find no suitable financing and fell out of grace with the navy, which subsequently dropped its proposal.

When Jacobs' opposition to the procurement system became known the curtain fell on any further bidding opportunities.

Meanwhile, the navy successfully sued Jacobs for his bombsight technical data and when he tried to appeal the Internal Revenue Service stepped in with tax claims that wiped him out. The Jacobs Instrument Co. was seized, along with his and his wife's personal bank accounts.

They did not get funds secreted for a new start elsewhere. That and his ideas.

"What they couldn't get was locked up in my mind. It was the link of the system and it wasn't down on paper," Jacobs said.

After rejecting Australia as a new base, the Jacobs went to Vancouver and finally settled here as complete strangers .

It was difficult to start business in electronics without industry, government or academic contacts, Jacobs said, but he established himself through courses at the University of Victoria and joined the electrical and electronics institute, leading him toward computer systems design and analysis.

Today he is busy in an industry where universities are pressed to meet demand for computer specialists. Yet, he would like to resume work in ballistics.

"I'm primarily a weapons man," Jacobs insisted, tracing this interest back to boyhood when he began collecting vintage firearms.

A glance around his study walls confirms this passion is unabated. Glass cases contain pre-Civil War rifles and revolvers, dating to the present day and including sophisiticated automatic weapons of Europe and North America.

During the Second World War Jacobs designed an anti-aircraft gun with muzzle velociy of 16,000 feet per second, then the world's highest, and saw it test fired in New Mexico.

He has worked as a physicist for such U.S. agencies as the Bureau of Standards, naval ordnance, the naval observatory, and North American Aviation, where he was section chief in its guided missile laboratory.

Jacobs was research project supervisor at the University of New Mexico and for 10 years ran his own research firm.

His election as a fellow of IEEE cites "contributions and technical leadership in electronic computers, aircraft navigation systems, missile range and guidance instrumentation, and aviation fire control." Recently, with small boaters in mind, he invented a self-correcting chronometer for celestial navigation.

Jacobs finds it hard to say what the future holds, hoping he might get back into electronic hardware rather than programming or software.

What if there had been no trouble with the American authorities?

"I would probably be the president and technical director of a very large corporation," he said.

Sidney Tugman, Partner Survive Freighter Crash

A Sidney man said today he and his partner spent 15 chilling minutes in the water after losing their tug boat in a collision with a French freighter near Lion's Gate bridge Monday night.

John Davies, 50, and his partner, 25-year-old Bruce Tenant, of Vancouver were treated for exposure when they were rescued from Vancouver's harbor.

Their 14-metre tug Storm Crest and the 166-metre freighter Telendos collided and the tug sank.

Davies, interviewed by telephone as he checked out of the Lion's Gate hospital at 10:15 a.m. today, said he and his partner are in good condition.

He refused to discuss the accident, however, which is under investigation by the National Harbors Board (NHB).

"We're both fine but I can't talk about it right now," said Davies.

"Maybe later. We're just going to go into the office now and find out what's going on."

Meanwhile, harbor officials had set up warning markers on the wreck which is sitting in 18 metres of water in the harbor's narrow entrance. The harbor will not be closed to deep-sea traffic.

Steven Ryback, a Transport Canada spokesman, said the steel-hulled tug and the freighter were outbound when the collision occurred about one kilometre east of Lions Gate Bridge.

The Telendos, bound for Seattle with general cargo in containers, anchored in English Bay after the incident. Marine surveyors will check its plates for damage today.

Woman Held In Stabbing

A 38-year-old Saanich woman was charged in provincial court Monday afternoon with attempted murder and wounding with intent after a Sunday night stabbing on Hartland Road.

Mary Ann Amadio, 30 Hartland, was remanded until today when judicial interim release and her election of trial will be considered.

In asking for the remand, Crown prosecutor Robert Mulligan said he is concerned about the mental state of the accused and wants a doctor to examine her.

Saanich police said the victim, Margaret Grace Mckay, 58, of 121 Hartland, is in good condition in hospital.

'No Flimsy' Report On School Problems

By
LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

STABLES
. . . full report

An administrative report on allegations of serious maintenance problems in Greater Victoria schools must be much more than a "flimsy little piece of paper," Trustee Peter Yorke said Monday night.

The report must answer all charges of maintenance deterioration by a local parent group.

Yorke, elaborating today, said the board was embarrassed by publicity surrounding charges of school problems ranging from termites to a leaking roof and wants its name cleared.

Charges of specific maintenance problems were made in a letter to the board last month by the Confederation of Victoria Parents Associations (CVPA).

Since then publicity has made the charges a hot issue, Yorke said.

"If these problems exist we want to know why and what the administration is doing about them," he said.

Yorke said he has no idea what Stables plans to include in his report.

"I just want to make sure its not just a flimsy little piece of paper," he said.

Stables was questioned by Yorke before a crowd attending the new board's first regular meeting.

Yorke said he wants to know if Stables was aware of the maintenance problems.

When the letter was submitted to the board Dec. 18 by CVPA president Marilyn Berry, Stables said he didn't know anything about the problems.

Later a spokesman for the school district said Stables was aware of maintenance deterioration this year.

Yorke wants an explanation of the channels used to report problems to the administration.

The parents groups inferred principals couldn't get action when they reported maintenance problems, he said today.

"If a parent group has to come forward with a list of complaints then something's wrong somewhere."

Extensive media coverage of the issue was sought by the parents group and has damaged administration and the district.

Stables told the board he hadn't planned to explain the charges.

"I wasn't presenting a case of defence, but rather of investigation," Stables told Yorke.

Stables said he was investigating specific allegations.

The list included termites at McKenzie, a leaking roof at Willows and severe deterioration to grounds and buildings at Colquitz elementary.

The parent group claims maintenance levels have been deteriorating for some time, and are the result of staff cutbacks this year and lack of communication with administration.

The board decided to invite Berry to a meeting to discuss Stables' investigation of the problems.

No date was set for the meeting.

Quick Math Buries 'Bribery' Bid

A suggestion by Greater Victoria school trustee Mark Fisher that homeowners who vote in municipal and school board elections be awarded a bonus of $25 was rejected as bribery by the board Monday night.

Trustee Susan Brice, who said the attempt to fight voter apathy had a certain flair, asked Fisher to think up some other measure.

"Would you buy $12.95?" Fisher asked.

The proposal was shot down by several trustees. John Young called it undemocratic, Mary Breer said it was a violation of human rights, Winfield Mott said it was too expensive and Martin Levin said it was bribery.

The most convincing argument, however, came from Mott who said it would cost between $200,000 and $1 million, depending on how many homeowners voted.

End of discussion.

Jean drove into town to (a) pick up a registered letter, (b) drop off a painting to the Little Gallery, which exhibits her works.

She got the registered letter and found out she has to return $750 from a federal grant (the cash is long spent).

No picture. Pinched.

Jolly Jack's a Million-Dollar Catch

The most eligible bachelor here these days has to be Jack Livsey, a 29-year-old self-employed carpenter who lives with his parents in Sidney.

Jack, according to one admirer, looks a little like Tom Jones.

But there are precisely one million other reasons Jack's become a prize catch — the $1 million dollar Provincial draw he won New Year's Eve.

He hasn't figured out yet what he will do with the money. For the moment, he says, he'll probably take a little holiday, somewhere south, and just sit back and think about it for a while.

What a delicious problem.

The late Bill Scott had a wry sense of humor.

Laughter should flow, he told them, and to help make sure it did, he was earmarking $5,000 in his will for liquid sustenance for the mourners.

Well Bill's gone and so are the hopes for an alcoholic farewell.

Seems he crossed everybody up — there's no $5,000 in the will — at least not for drinking and that's enough to make anyone cry.

Royal Roads Military College will be the scene this week of some shooting for a $7-million movie called The Changeling.

The college will be used as the estate for Douglas who plays the part of a big-time senator.

A Town Talk regular asks if other hockey fans are as irritated as he is by play-by-play announcer Bill Hewitt's constant use of Toronto Maple Leaf forward Lanny McDonald's full name.

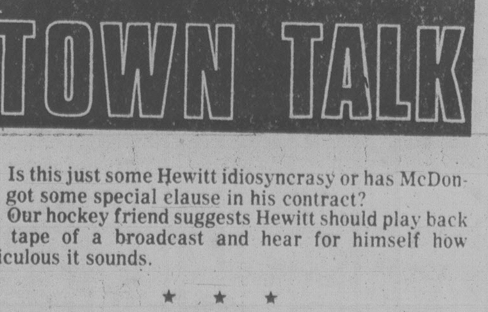
It may not be quite that bad but you get the idea.



Is this just some Hewitt idiosyncrasy or has McDonald got some special clause in his contract?

Come Jan. 15, residents of the Western Community who travel to town by bus will be able to obtain transfers to urban bus routes.

Among other improvements, fare concessions will be available for children, students and senior citizens.

On the face of it such operational changes appear modest enough, relatively quick and easy to accomplish.

But obviously there is a complexity and degree of difficulty involved which simply cannot be grasped by someone who is not an expert on transit matters.

There must be, because these particular changes haven't been implemented overnight.

That was June 1, 1975. Yes, three and a half years ago.
